THE HOUSE OF HORSES

When the McKenzie Pass opens and schools close, visitors from all over the United States and many foreign countries stop at "The House of Horses," a unique museum that houses miniature horses carved by the artistic hands of Martha (Mrs. J. Michael) Shelley of Vida, Ore.

There they see over 100 horses of 25 breeds displayed in appropriate surroundings in shadow boxes. Each horse is doing the job he was born and bred to do, for Mrs. Shelley's collection represents the history of the horse down through the centuries.

"It is highly enjoyable," writes Mrs. Shelley, "to talk horses with a visitor who cannot speak English and whose language I cannot speak. But we always end with complete understanding, our gestures and smiles making us of one mind if not one tongue, because there before us is the horse doing his job."

"I've been a lover of horses since childhood, and my plan is to pass my project on when and if I ever complete it. It is a big job, one that will keep me busy the rest of my life. I have no carvings to sell."

"My knowledge of the anatomy of the horse stems from the experience I had at an early age in working with and training them. They were our only means of transportation up to the time I was married."

Ashland Council to Continue Policy

Ashland-The Ashland city council has decided to continue its policy against extending city water lines outside of the city limits.

The council reaffirmed its position last week when it heard a request for city water service by Gerald E. Olson of Ashland Acres, outside of the city.

The council has authorized extension of city water service for a multi-million dollar subdivision designed primarily for the retired and proposed to be built around the Ashland Golf course, but councilmen explained that this was a special case.

In other items, the council discussed proposed changes in the city charter. No action was taken. Some of the councilmen questioned the advisability of one proposed change which would place certain elective officers under the jurisdiction of the city superintendent, an appointed officer.

A hearing on paving of Hillview dr. and Greenbriar place was set June 19.

Medford Student Gets Oregon Scholarship

Roger Wright Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Harris, 720 Whitman place, Medford, has received a Rockwell Scholarship for 1962-63, given in memory of the late Mrs. Mary E. Rockwell.

A freshman majoring in mathematics at the university, Harris is a graduate of Medford High school. During the past year, he studied under a Karl Onthank Scholarship and a state fee scholarship.

Methodist Ministers To Get Pay Increase

Salem - (UPI) - Methodist ministers in the state got a pay increase here as the Oregon Methodist conference ended its 110th annual session.

A $100 increase was approved, bringing the annual minimum salary for a fulltime minister to $3,500 plus allowances. The allowance for children of ministers was boosted $50, to $250.

Richardson Top Vote-Getter In California See-Saw Race

Sacramento - Ralph Richardson, Los Angeles, was the top vote-getter in the see-saw race for California superintendent of public instruction in the state's primary election. The long-delayed count was completed late Friday. It showed Richardson with 705,821 votes compared to 641,808 for his nearest rival, Max Rafferty. The two will contest in a run-off election this fall.

From a field of nine candidates in the non-partisan race, three, including a liberal, a right-winger and a third whose political philosophy lies somewhere in between, ran neck-and-neck during most of the counting. Each of the three had held a lead at one point in the counting.

Richardson, president of the Los Angeles City Board of Education is said to be the most liberal of the three.

Shows Up Tabulation

Cecil Hardesty, San Diego County superintendent of schools, was third with 631,230. Rafferty is considered a right-winger.

Elsewhere in the California election, three members of the John Birch society won.

Incumbent Congressman John H. Rousselot had a 3 to 1 margin over his Republican opponent Thomas F. Noonan in the 25th district, and incumbent Edgar W. Hiestand had a 5 to 1 lead over Marshall M. Mercer in the 27th. The third Birch, H. L. Richardson, seeking the Republican nomination in the 29th district, had a 2 to 1 margin over his nearest competitor in a four-way contest.

Running Third Another right-winger, former State Sen. Jack Tenney, was running third for the Republican nomination in the 38th congressional district, however.

All four of these congressional races were in Southern California, where right-wing groups are stronger than in other areas of the nation.

In other state-wide races, with unofficial returns complete, the picture looked like this:

Richard Nixon's lead over Joseph Shell for the Republican gubernatorial nomination was a shade under 2 to 1. Nixon had 1,287,599 votes to Shell's 671,247. On the Democratic side, Gov. Edmund G. Brown had 1,732,089 votes as compared to 130,272 for his closest rival.

Sen. Thomas Kuchel's lead over his nearest opponent for the Republican senatorial nomination was 1,331,433 to 243,953, while Richard Richardson, state senator from Los Angeles county, had a 1,618,296 to 177,482 lead over his closest rival for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

For lieutenant governor, Incumbent Democrat Glenn Anderson had a 1,644,679 to 367,515 lead over William B. McKesson, district attorney of Los Angeles county. George Christopher, mayor of San Francisco, won the Republican nomination and was ahead by 1,243,211 to 565,600 over State Sen. Jack McCarthy.

Tom Coakley won the Republican nomination for attorney general over two other candidates. He had 780,821 votes, Bruce F. Allen 497,624 and Richard J. Dolwig 352,184. Incumbent Stanley Mosk was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan easily won the Republican nomination for his office with 1, 518,162 votes. His nearest rival had 85,822. Don Rose won the Democratic nomination in a four-way race and had a 2 to 1 lead over his nearest competitor.

Alan Cranston, incumbent Democrat, and Bruce V. Reagan, Republican assemblyman, won respective party nominations controller. Each was unopposed.

Treasurer Bert A. Belts was unopposed for renomination on the Democratic ballot, while Assemblyman John A. Buser won the Republican nomination with a 1,127,867 to 408,707 lead over his only rival.

Of six propositions on the ballot, three were passed while the other three were defeated. Propositions for school bonds and veterans bond won, the first by 2,205,353 to 1,506,616, the second by 1,857,894 to 1,821,870.

Proposition 6, to extend daylight saving time an extra month, passed by more than 2 to 1.

Losing was Proposition 3, for state construction bonds, by 1,309,982 to 2,191,412; proposition 4, bonds for housing for the aged, by 1,382,465 to 2,390,707; and proposition 5, recreation bonds, by 1,669,292 to 1,843,632.

Court in Quandary Over Fire District

The Jackson county court is in a quandary about what to do about an "in and out" Rogue River rural fire district section.

Recently, two large areas were joined to the Rogue River rural fire district following a petition to the county court.

One of the areas included was the Lampman rd. area in the Gold Hill district between the Rogue river and the new freeway.

Now, approximately 30 individuals of that area have petitioned the county court to be withdrawn from the district.

Figuring travel time on old Highway 99, the Lampman rd. area residents say they are too distant from Rogue River to be adequately served by the fire department.

However, County Judge Earl M. Miller estimates travel time on the recently completed section of the freeway would be only six minutes from Rogue River.
