

ORCHIDS AT WILDERVILLE—This is a scene in Marcellus Frost's greenhouse near Wilderville showing some of his orchids as they appeared earlier this spring.

Marcellus Frost Gaining High Reputation for His Wilderville Orchids

By GENEVIEVE BRIGGS
Wilderville - Marcellus P. Frost, whose greenhouse is located near here, has become one of the outstanding hybridizers of orchids in the Pacific Northwest. Frost's interest in orchids started when he went to a flower show in Los Angeles and won a seedling. To house the seedling he built a small greenhouse. He became so fascinated with the culture that he bought more and more. The collection grew, and when Frost moved from Los Angeles to southern Oregon four years ago, to get into clean air and damp winters in which orchids thrive, he brought 1,800 plants with him. This year he had 6,000 blooms which were cut and sold during Easter season. Orchids bloom from February to June. Frost says his greatest thrill is to see a seedling he has painstakingly hybridized open its face to a world that has never seen its face before. He speaks of the many times he has gone out with a flashlight at night to see if a particular plant has opened. His most outstanding plant is Etta Barlow Vanity, a priceless one. Others that have made him famous are Lillian Stewart, Balkis Silver Orb and Rosan Vanity Pink. Frost entertained the Medford Garden club during April, and among other spring visitors was Gordon Hoyt of Seattle, authority on orchids, who was impressed by the variety and quality of Frost's orchids. The public is also invited to visit Frost's greenhouse.
