Outdoor Cooking More Popular

Once upon a time a "cook-out" was reserved for very special occasions. It required just the right weather, the perfect spot at a beach or park, planning of special menus and considerable packing of foods and accessories.

All of this is of the past. This may very well prove to be the age of "outdoor cooking" as well as that of the "space age."

From elaborate barbecue equipment that matches the brick and masonry facades of the home and patio ... to tiny portable hibachis and table-top units - everyone's "cooking with charcoal."

Besides the countless variations on built-in barbecues that dot the patios and yards of the nation, there is every conceivable style of braziers. Inexpensive motorized types that are easily moved about, or elaborate wagon-cookers that have everything but the kitchen sink built into them.

For the picnic in your own backyard - hamburgers, hot dogs, steaks and ribs are favorite main courses everywhere. Chicken and turkeys are becoming increasingly popular when "done to a turn" on the revolving spits.

Electric, LP gas coal igniters and an assortment of liquid fire starters are available to get charcoal and briquets started quickly and evenly.

A whole new industry has come into being with special serving dishes for barbecues in smart melamine plastics, woodenware and ceramics.

Patio-perfect accessories to set a fine table include easy-care table cloths and napkins, stainless flatware, insulated glass ware and serving pieces well as an extensive variety of gaylooking disposable cloths and plates.

Backyard fun fests and feasts can be evening affairs, too. Gay lanterns, especially the oriental types, swing and sway in the summer breezes, adding a truly gay mood to the setting.

Hawaiian-inspired luau torches help lend a romantic light to your patio party and also repel pesky nocturnal insects.

Golfers Must Check Equipment Carefully

Golfers intent on improving their game should double-check their equipment at the beginning of this season. The often-overlooked handle grip is one of the key features of a good club. It should be made of leather, immovably secured to the club, ravel-proof, and perforated so the hands can take and maintain a firm, powerful grip on the club. A good leather grip contributes to more distance in driving and steadier, more accurate chipping and putting.

Other items for the linksman include perforated leather gloves for a tighter grip and protection against blisters and friction, and water-resistant leather golf shoes: the leather is treated to keep out the morning dews and damp, while retaining its natural porosity for dry, cool feet for the entire game.

Vacationers Travel With Mobile Homes

The mobile homes and travel trailers that dot the many special parks or skim along the nation's highways this year are a far cry from the crudely-constructed "vans" of the Thirties when they first came "into being."

In addition to the countless retired folk, servicemen and their families, construction job workers and others who make their mobile homes their year-around dwelling, vacationers swell the ranks with their take-along travel trailers.

Vacation trailers are smaller and more compact than mobile homes. They are designed so that they may be easily hitched to the family car. Convenient, and often deluxe, built-ins provide cooking, dining and sleeping facilities for up to four people.

New Fishing 'Gear' Makes Angling Fun

Every year, thousands of folks turn to fishing for fun and relaxation. Perhaps you are one of the few who have never dropped a line and would like to make this the year to begin your angling fun.

New fishing gear makes it possible for the rawest recruit into fisherman's ranks to enjoy this interesting and intriguing sport.

Of course, you can always start with a cane pole, a length of line and a hook on which to put your worms.
