

Ribs Good For Cooking Over Grill

If your plans for Father's day call for a patio meal, try grilled beef shortribs and pork spareribs, which are economical as well as tasty. The flavor of the ribs can be enhanced by marinating them for an hour or two in beer or ale, with a touch of garlic, before they are grilled. Shortribs also must be simmered before they are grilled or roasted.

Basting the ribs with a savory barbecue sauce and turning them over the glowing coals is a job to be entrusted to the man of the house. This recipe calls for 3 pounds beef shortribs, cut in 3-inch pieces, 3 pounds of pork spareribs, 1 bottle or can of beer or ale, 1 clove garlic, minced and 1 1/2 cups all-purpose seasoning barbecue sauce.

Cover shortribs with water; bring to a boil. Simmer 45 to 60 minutes until almost tender. Drain. Cut spareribs into 2-rib pieces. Combine beer and garlic. Pour over shortribs and spareribs in shallow baking pan. Marinate in refrigerator 1 hour. Remove; drain beer and garlic into small bowl and add all-purpose seasoning barbecue sauce. Grill shortribs and spareribs over glowing coals, turning occasionally and basting frequently with barbecue mixture, until meat is tender, dark brown and glazed. Makes 8 servings.

Shortribs and spareribs may also be roasted in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 1 1/2 to 2 hours, turning occasionally and basting frequently with barbecue mixture. Shortribs should be boiled as above before roasting.
