Persons Warned Against Buying Public Lands From Unethical Land Promoters

The Better Business bureau of Portland has warned those persons who may be in the market to purchase public lands, according to Don McNeil, manager of the Medford Chamber of Commerce. The availability of public lands for purchase by the public has resulted in so-called "land locators," who abuse the privilege of filing non-mineral applications and petitions for public lands.

This has come about because some of the public lands are sold to individuals and state and local governments. The government places some small tracts on sale, and until recently it has been possible for people to file applications for the lands under most of the non-mineral land laws.

To control such land locators, the Secretary of the Interior in 1961 announced an 18-month moratorium on such applications. Although this moratorium has now been lifted in Montana, North and South Dakota, Colorado, and Wyoming, it will remain in effect until Sept. 1, 1962, in other states.

In connection with the lifting of the moratorium, the Portland Better Business bureau cautions people seeking public lands to beware of unethical land locators or promoters. McNeil emphasized that anyone dealing with an
