Franklin, Tex. — (AP) — The state grand jury investigating the mysterious death of agriculture official Henry Marshall was scheduled to reconvene for its fifth week today with testimony expected from four subpoenaed agriculture officials.

The agriculture officials who had a chance to testify today were Pecos County USDA field representative Henry S. Carver, and Texas ACS representatives Ralph T. Price of College Station, John T. Gayle of West Columbia and James E. Goad of Rosenberg.

Dist. Atty. Bryan Ross said Sunday that he will probably decide today whether to make a request that all three USDA agriculture officials — Emory Jacobs, Bill Morris and Dr. James T. Ralph — who were either fired or quit, appear before the grand jury.

Ross said these men apparently got reports from Marshall since they were in the Agriculture department at the time Marshall worked, Morris and Ralph were fired by Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman for their connections with Billie Sol Estes, Jacobs quit.

The jury has been in recess deliberating the testimony of Billie Sol Estes whose cotton allotments Marshall was credited with investigating before Marshall died last year.

Dist. Judge John M. Barron said Sunday that he had an off — the — cuff talk with Estes in his office after Estes left the grand jury room last week. Estes told him he had no information about Marshall's death.

"After he (Estes) left the grand jury room, he visited me in my office," Barron said. "Before he left he shook hands with me and told me 'I know nothing about the death of Henry Marshall. I am very sorry it happened and sorry that my name was linked with it.'"

"If I run across anything in my files or if anything develops through which I may shed any light on the case I promise to make this information available to the grand jury and cooperate in every way."

Barron hastened to add that he was not divulging any information about what went on in the grand jury room.

Khrushchev Gets Warm Welcome In Bucharest

Bucharest, Romania — (AP) — Thirty thousand Romanians welcomed Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev today at the start of an eight-day visit designed to bolster economic and military cooperation with the Soviet bloc.

Romanian Communist party and government leaders were among the crowd at the railroad station where his special train pulled in from the Ukrainian border.

Romanian party chief and President Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej embraced Khrushchev and said he hoped the visit would help develop "the friendship between the two nations and strengthen the unity of the socialist camp."

Khrushchev, in an apparent good mood, congratulated the Romanians for their achievement in building socialism.

Cooperation Praised

He praised the cooperation between Russia and Romania, and said both countries are linked "in their will" to build socialism and communism.

When he was introduced to foreign diplomats, Khrushchev seized the opportunity to promote increased trade between Russia and Sweden. He told Swedish Charge d'Affaires Olav Landenius, "The Soviet Union is a good market."

Sweden and Europe's two other neutrals — Switzerland and Austria — are considering a possible arrangement with the European Common Market which Khrushchev has denounced as an "imperialist" threat to world trade.

While Khrushchev's visit is described officially as a good will tour, it is expected to include extensive talks on the Soviet bloc's farm failures, Moscow's ideological differences with Communist China and Albania, the pace of de-Stalinization within the Communist camp, and Khrushchev's new "friendship" Yugoslavia.

Interest Applied To Math Teaching

By DONALD B. THACKREY
United Press International
Alameda, Calif. — (AP) — How long would it take you to throw away a billion dollars in $5 dollar bills?

The question may seem a little impractical to the average American, but at least it is more interesting than "If you have six oranges and sell me three of them..."

Louis Grant Brandes, assistant principal of the Alameda, Calif., High school, believes students like mathematics better — and, incidentally, learn more — when their interest is stimulated even through the practical aspect of turning out good fruit vendors is ignored.

"Too many students, he contends, 'never experience the real 'flavor' of mathematics.'"

"This is most unfortunate. An exposure to mathematics without the related enrichment materials is like eating pancakes without butter or syrup," he says. "It must be just as hard to learn to like 'dry' mathematics as it would be to like 'dry' pancakes."

To help sweeten up the subject, J. Weston Welch, Portland, Me., publisher, is bringing out Brandes' third math book, entitled "4 the math wizard."

"I feel that the book should provide an effective teaching aid for secondary school teachers, especially with accelerated youngsters in the seventh and eighth grades," Brandes says.

"A recent emphasis on enrichment of the mathematics curriculum has brought forth many fine references. A relatively few of these, however, are in language that can be understood by students beginning their study of mathematics in our secondary schools."

Oregon Traffic Takes Six Lives

By United Press International
Traffic accidents on Oregon highways over the week end took six lives, three of them in one accident.

Two persons were killed Sunday. Maurice Berry, 42, of Spokane was killed in a one-car crash on State Highway 204 about 18 miles east of Weston in Umatilla county.

Mrs. Betty Sandberg, 33, Grants Pass, died when her car went out of control and struck a telephone pole and a tree in that city.

A Colorado couple and an Iowa woman died in a head-on crash near Ontario Saturday. The victims were Frank Eckman, 72, Haxton, Colo.; his wife, Hulda, also 72, and Mrs. Joan Kahle, 32, Dubuque, Iowa.

State police said the northbound Eckman car swerved into the path of a southbound station wagon occupied by Mrs. Kahle and her family. Eckman was attempting to avoid hitting a boy riding a bicycle.

Phillip Garcia, 16, was injured fatally in a one-car accident near his home in Astoria. State police said his car left a Clatsop county road and slammed into a tree.

Increased Sales of National Forest Timber May Further Depress Market

By ELMER W. LAMMI
United Press International
Washington — (AP) — Forest Service chief Edward P. Cliff warned today that the sale of more national forest timber to the lumber industry might have a further depressing effect on the market.

But Cliff told the Senate Commerce Committee that his agency would try to sell the full allowable cut to help meet complaints by the lumber industry that it could not get enough logs to keep mills in operation.

"It might have a further depressing effect on the market unless demand improves," he told West Coast senators who questioned him for two and a half hours on Forest Service timber sale policies.

Cliff said the outlook for increased demand was "not too encouraging." He noted that forecasts of more housing starts were not being reflected in the lumber market.

The committee, under Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) would open a long series of hearings on the problems of the lumber industry. The hearings, presumably called to study the impact of lumber imports from Canada on the U.S. lumber industry, ranged far and wide in covering other problems of the depressed domestic industry.

Morse Attacks Red Tape

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) renewed his attack on the Kennedy administration, saying it was guilty of "red tape and delay" in taking action to help the depressed lumber industry.

Insisting that his criticism of Cliff was "wholly impersonal," Morse termed the Forest Service chief's statement "a Forest Service snow job."

The Oregonian went on to attack the Forest Service as having been granted too much authority. He recommended setting up an independent appeals board to provide an "effective check" on the agency's power.

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel (R-Calif.) questioned Cliff sharply on what steps it would take to make more timber available when it could be done to

PP&L Dedicates Largest Substation In Oregon System

Albany — Officials of Pacific Power and Light company Monday dedicated the largest power substation on its Oregon system, a $1,500,000 facility that will be the northern terminus for a 100-mile-long transmission line soon to interconnect the company's southern Oregon hydroelectric plants with those located on northern rivers.

Under construction for more than a year, it has already been energized to supply power lines radiating to the nearby cities of Salem, Lebanon and Corvallis and the adjacent areas served by the company.

PP&L President D. R. McClung reported the 230,000-volt line that is now under construction will link PP&L's northern system powerhouses with those on the Umpqua, Rogue and Klamath rivers. The southern terminus will be at Dixonville south of Roseburg, where facilities also have been installed.

Confidence in Line

McClung described the investments totaling almost four million dollars in the line and substations as an affirmation of the company's confidence that the electric power needs of the region will continue to grow. He said that it will make possible the most efficient use of the diversity of the river flows for power production.

In a luncheon speech later to Albany and Linn county industrial leaders, McClung said the growing concentration of research laboratories in the mid-Willamette valley will in the long-range have beneficial impact on the economy. Noting how the advancing technology has pushed new forestry products into the market from the residue of lumbering, McClung said other ideas will be born in the fertile minds of the young men now engaged in research in the area's laboratories and research centers.

Private Machines Vend Cigarettes To Many Heavy Smokers

New York — (AP) — Cigarette vending machines now can be found in a surprising number of private homes in Australia, according to a recent issue of the Journal of Marketing.

John S. Ewing, graduate business faculty member of Stanford university, wrote in an article that these machines are mostly in the homes of heavy smokers who want to avoid running out when the shops are closed.

Increased Sales of National Forest Timber May Further Depress Market

when the current fiscal year ends June 30, the Forest Service would have sold 1.4 billion board feet of its 1.5 billion allowable cut for California.

Cliff said the Forest Service had allowed bigger cuts in some areas, notably Northern Idaho, but said it was "not a healthy thing" to exceed the allowable cut except when losses could be "recouped" after economic conditions improved.

"The most significant contribution we could make is to sell the full allowable cut and to do it in an orderly way," Cliff told Kuchel. He said that when the current fiscal year ends June 30, the Forest Service would have sold 1.4 billion board feet of its 1.5 billion allowable cut for California.

Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.) contended that the Forest Service was not allowing timber to be harvested when it was "ripe." Likening timber to a peach crop, he said it had to be cut when it was ripe and should not be left to be "harvested by fire and the insect lumber company."

Cliff said it was not possible
