Priest Provides Homes for Job Seeking Ex-Cons

By WILLIAM C. FOGARTY
United Press International
St. Louis — The last and most forceful of the many futile pleas to save the life of convicted slayer Vincent Ciucci of Chicago came from a "square" priest who felt death would be merciful for Ciucci but a life sentence more merciful for the governor who had to decide.

"Whoever takes a life, whether lawfully or unlawfully, lives with this decision the rest of his life," Father Charles Dismas Clark, S.J., the convict's best friend, wired an hour before Ciucci's death to Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner.

"I would rather see you live with Ciucci's life sentence than with his death."

To the convict and ex-convict, the law-abiding citizen is a "square man" or "square woman." Cops are "fuzz," prison guards are "screws" and prison is "the joint."

Whether Father Clark, whose deceptively fragile appearance covers great inner courage, is "square" or not, he admits he was in trouble when he was young and before he entered the Jesuit order.

Adopts Name
Known now as the "Hoodlum Priest," Father Clark took the name of a hoodlum-Dismas, the repentant thief crucified next to Christ. He took the welfare of the ex-con, branded and rejected by society, as his own, just as he had taken the hood's jargon.

High Explosion Try Rescheduled

Honolulu — (UPI) — U.S. Joint Task Force 8 announced it will make another attempt early Wednesday to fire its controversial high altitude nuclear test several hundred miles above Johnston Island, 800 miles southwest of the Hawaiian Islands.

The explosion was scheduled between 1 a.m. and 4:30 a.m. (PST). Commercial and military plane travel in the area was restricted.

The test was originally scheduled for early today, but high cloudiness over the Johnston area forced the latest in a series of postponements which have occurred since the rocket-borne nuclear project got under way June 1.

Charles Laughton Remains Under Care

Hollywood — (UPI) — Actor Charles Laughton remained under strict medical care today at his Hollywood home, recuperating from a collarbone operation.

Laughton's agent, Taft Schreiber, said the actor was "doing fine, but he is going to have to take care of himself."

Schreiber said he thought the film "Advise and Consent," in which Laughton played a featured role, had contributed to his rundown condition.

"He just won't too darned hard," said Schreiber. "He's not a child anymore, and he's really exhausted from working too hard."

DAM EXPERTS ARRIVE

Moscow — (UPI) — A team of experts from the United Arab Republic arrived in Moscow Monday for talks on the Aswan high dam project, according to the Soviet news agency Tass. Tass said the group was led by Musa Arafat, minister for construction of the dam.

HOODLUM PRIEST — Father Charles Dismas Clark, S.J., the "Hoodlum Priest," who took the name "Dismas" from the repentant thief who was crucified next to Christ, runs a house here where ex-cons can live while looking for jobs. There are plans for other such hostels, called "Dismas Houses," in Chicago, Toledo, New York, Miami, New Orleans, Minneapolis and San Francisco. (UPI) normal that he's worried sick he'll lose his new job because he hurt his finger in a printing press.

A tour of Dismas House impresses the visitor with three things—the cleanliness, bright surroundings and impressive quiet. "They don't talk when they get out," Father Clark said. "When they do it is in a low tone, as if someone is always listening."

Having obtained a job for the ex-con, Father Clark also must fend off the man's former cell-mates or criminal elements who would turn him again to crime.

Because he hates some of the police methods used on people he believes also are "created in God's image," he turns more often to the kingpins of crime to enforce his "hands off" rule for those who want to go straight. These top gangsters hold him in near reverence.

"I just can't explain it," Father Clark said. "These gangsters who lead the lives I am trying to steer my men away from, have passed the word to lay off. When they talk, hoods listen."

"I know that man would die for me. I also know that if I ever gave him any real trouble, other hoods would beat my brains out!"

Managing Adolescent Children

A while ago, Dr. A. H. Chapman wrote an article full of good advice for parents who are puzzling over how to deal with their adolescent children. The doctor advises; 1. To couple restrictions with privileges. As he said, many parents always are telling children what they CAN'T do, and this is likely to produce feelings of resentment and misunderstanding.

When I had four growing children, my principle was never to deny them any activity unless there was some very good reason for it. Then I quietly talked over this reason with the child, trying to get him or her to see that I was not willingly thwarting him or her, but only doing what I thought was wisest and best.

Let us say that a teen-age daughter wants to go on a week-end party with practically no chaperonage. Instead of telling her that she can't go, her mother might say that it is not advisable, and that sort of thing would not do her reputation any good.

If the child has learned that the parents always want them to be happy and to be doing what they want to do, they probably will agree when they are advised not to do something.

The second suggestion of Dr. Chapman is to couple liberty with responsibility. As he says, the teen-ager is constantly demanding more freedom, and this is all right if it is coupled with responsibility and a good reason. If an adolescent boy wants to take out the family car, then he should not be outraged if, occasionally, his father asks him to wash it. Similarly, if a teen-age girl is always free to entertain a group of her school friends for an evening at home, she should assume the responsibility for much of the subsequent cleaning up. If a girl is to have unlimited dating privileges, she should be willing to bring her friends home and to introduce them to her parents.

The third suggestion is that the wise parent couple commitments with criticism. As Dr. Chapman says, a mother, while objecting to her young son's untidy dress and appearance, may say, "You are really such a good-looking boy. George, you should keep looking neat and clean, so better go upstairs and wash your face and change your clothes." The same way, the mother may suggest that her daughter is beautiful enough without an excessive amount of lipstick and mascara.

The fourth suggestion is that the parents spend more time talking with their children and listening to what they have to say. Parents should not demand the old-fashioned type of obedience to parents simply because they are parents; they should often say, "I am not asking that you do this for my convenience; I am asking you to learn discipline and obedience and thoughtfulness of others so that some day you will have a successful and happy life."

Problems of sex ought to be discussed with the children in a matter-of-fact and truthful way, but with idealism. Boys and girls should early be told of the dangers of sexual adventures, with ruinous character and refinement. Such knowledge can save them endless pain and sorrow later.

A boy or girl in a well-to-do family may want to have a car as soon as the law allows. But the parents should point out that statistics show that 16-year-olds have a great tendency to speed, to smash up the car and to injure or kill themselves. Heads of colleges know that a car can ruin a youngster's scholastic record. The wise parent will say,

Northwest Bell, CWA Talk Wages

Portland — (UPI) — Bargaining begins Wednesday between the Pacific Northwest Bell Telephone Co. and the Communications Workers of America on wage issues.

Under terms of wage reopening clauses in the three-year contract, only subjects to be negotiated are basic weekly wage rates, exchange classifications, job differentials and title classifications.

Some 4,350 employees are affected in the firm's Oregon area.

The wage reopening date is midnight, Aug. 19.

Contracts with the CWA will be negotiated in Seattle under a special agreement with the union which consolidates bargaining for both of Pacific Northwest Bell's operating areas — Oregon and Washington-Idaho.

FURNISHING DEN

Bedford, England — (UPI) — Two eight-year-old boys appeared in juvenile court Monday for taking nail clippers, a miniature car, an alarm clock, three roses, a pint of milk, 24 bottles of beer and a prayer book from neighboring houses. They explained that they were furnishing their den.

"Wait a while; a car right now can ruin you."

Fifth, Dr. Chapman suggested that, whenever possible, the adolescent be given his own room and some privacy. Parents should never go snooping through a child's possessions. Many a parent has earned the lasting distrust of a teen-age girl by reading her diary.

Sixth, often if an adolescent wants some luxury, let him or her work and earn the money, perhaps baby sitting, or selling newspapers, or mowing lawns. The adolescent needs praise and commendation, and some much need words and signs of affection.

Children never should be ridiculed or nagged at, or sneered at because of some defect, such as flaring ears or a slight stutter. Parents who have good sense will do everything they can to have the child's handicap corrected.

Finally, the wise parent will never start a long term of punishment that will be as much or more trouble to the parents as to the child—such as for a month denying dessert at dinner, or the privilege of going to the movies.
