Political Philosophy Stressed by Candidate

The importance of a candidate's political philosophy was stressed by State Rep. Carl Fisher, Eugene, candidate for election to congress from the Fourth district, when he spoke here yesterday noon at a meeting of the Jackson County unit, Oregon Federation of Women's Republican clubs.

Mr. Fisher said that his political philosophy differs widely from that of his Democratic opponent, Robert Duncan, Medford.

Mr. Fisher described himself as a "free enterprise keep government out of business kind of man."

Pointing out that a man's voting record is the best test of his political philosophy, he declared that the "score card" issued by the state's labor leaders on the voting records of members of the 1959 Oregon legislature proved how different is his philosophy from that of Mr. Duncan.

The score card listed Representative Duncan as having voted "right" 26 times and "wrong" 2 times, by the labor leaders' standards, he said, while Representative Fisher had voted "right" only 8 times and "wrong" 20 times. By the labor score sheet, only nine representatives had more right votes than Representative Duncan, the speaker noted.

The score card of Rep. Ed Whelan, who is executive secretary of the Portland Labor council, was identical with that of Representative Duncan, the speaker added.

Mr. Fisher stressed that he was not "attacking" anyone and made an effort to distinguish between labor "bosses" and men and women who are laboring people. "I have faith in the good judgment of men and women in labor," he added.

Opposes Plan

The candidate opened his talk by saying that he is "unalterably opposed to the administration's plan to withhold a flat 20 per cent on dividend and interest income." He declared that such a law would allow the federal government to literally confiscate millions of dollars to which it has no right.

Mr. Fisher said he sympathized with the government's wish to collect the estimated $600 in taxes on dividend and interest incomes which is not now being paid, but added that he felt the proposed plan was not the best way to do this.
