

Mat Fans Expect Goering-Lindsey Affair To Be Wild

Wrestling fans are looking forward to a real donnybrook at Medford armory tomorrow night when Fritz Von Goering, big tough former German paratrooper, meets Luther Lindsey, flashy colored ace, in the main event, set for an hour or two out of three falls.

Von Goering drew the hatred of local customers earlier this spring in three battles with Rocky Columbo, one of which sent Columbo to a local hospital. Von Goering prefers to attempt to annihilate his opponents with any means handy and has made several appeals to the National Wrestling Alliance for more liberal rules.

Lindsey likes his grappling along scientific lines but is a terror when aroused, and nobody can arouse him quicker than the German.

Midget matmen, always a favorite locally, will hold the spotlight in the feature scrap for 30 minutes or the best of three falls.

Little Beaver, considered to be the best of the little fellows, teams with Tiny Tim to face Sky Low Low and Cowboy Cassidy.

A couple of newcomers will be seen in the opener, due on the mat at 8:30 p.m. Al Pago of Samoa, who does a sword dance before his matches, will go against Herb Freeman, a chiropractic college student in Portland. They're billed for 45 minutes or two out of three falls.

Robinson Medalist In National

Albuquerque, N. M. —(UPI)—June Robinson of Oregon State shot a near-record five-under-par 71 on the University of New Mexico course Tuesday to win medal honors in the National Women's Collegiate Golf tournament.

"It was the best putting I've done," the 21-year-old June graduate said. The blonde Oregon public links champion from Albany went out in 34 and toured the back nine in 37.

The women's course record, 70, is held by Joann Gundersen of Arizona State.

Sue Meerdink of Arizona State shot a 75 for medalist runnerup honors and schoolmate Carol Sorenson's 76 was third best qualifying round.

Their combined score of 151 gave Arizona State the team championship.

Judy Hoerner of Seattle university, the defending champion, did not have to qualify for match play, which begins today.

TEAMS SWAP

Seattle — (UPI)—Rac Slider, lefthanded hitting shortstop, was acquired by Seattle of the Pacific Coast league Tuesday from Portland in a straight player swap for utility infielder Jim Hughes, Dick Bee, general manager of the Rainiers, announced. Slider currently is hitting .243. He will join Seattle tonight for its game against Salt Lake City at Salt Lake.

Slider hit an even 300 for Hawaii of the PCL last season.

Bears Near Tie in NW; Eugene Trips Wenatchee

United Press International It was a tough fight but the Yakima Bears Tuesday night struggled to a virtual first-place tie with Wenatchee in the Northwest league.

Yakima topped Lewiston 6-2 and 7-5 while Eugene was blanking Wenatchee 5-0. Tri-City nipped Salem 3-2 in the other game.

Yakima had little trouble with Lewiston in the opener. Ethan Blackaby hit a solo homer in the first and Sonny Kopacz drove in two with a single in the second to give winner Roger Roy all the runs he needed.

The nightcap, however, was a different story. Lewiston led 5-3 when the Bears came up for the final time and only a four-run rally saved them.

Walt Hrinak won it with a two-run homer after the Bears had pushed across two runs to tie it. Hrinak also drove in two runs with a first-inning single.

Frank Linzy had Wenatchee eating out of his hand blanking the Chiefs on but five hits. Joe McLaughlin doubled home two Eugene runs in the fourth and Dick Dietz had a solo homer in the seventh.

Tri-City scored two runs in

Small Worlds Around Us

By LYNN M. WATKINS

(Register and Tribune Syndicate 1962)

Ask Any Hog — He'd Go 'Hog Wild' if He Could. It really doesn't take long for a hog actually to go "hog wild."

Even a domestic hog who has enjoyed the luxury of a comfortable pig sty, regular meals and a wet place to wallow in, if given the chance, cast aside the shackles of domestication and go native.

All the swine, of whatever breed, originated from ancestors which ran wild in Europe and Asia a very long time ago. In many areas, there are still wild hogs, first cousins to the lazy, fat porkers which are eating their heads off on fattening foods and all headed toward a single unenviable destination.

Any of them, given the chance and a convenient hole in a fence, would escape to the forest or any wild land, and after one or two confused days, would become a truly wild hog.

Plenty of Fruit

There is plenty of fruit in a forest if one's appetite is not squeamish, and a wild hog knows or soon learns where supplies are adequate. It is a carefree time of delightful leisure for the newly freed, or the one who has "turned tail" on civilization.

In many areas of this and many other countries, the wild boar is hunted as a game animal. It is a creature worthy of the chase, and a terrible adversary if angered and cornered.

Of course, a wild hog may not, technically, be a wild boar. The female is wild, too, but she isn't a boar. She's the boar's wife. But the hunter seeking wild boars will gladly take either father boar or mama hog.

Usually, even the wild hog is protected by game laws. All in all, the wild hog's life is relatively free from care. It's easy to understand why any pig would go "hog wild" over such pleasant prospects.

The hog is immune to poisonous snakes, for it is pretty difficult for the largest reptile to inject poison through heavy layers of fat and into a deep-seated bloodstream. The genuine wild hog seems to derive a certain measure of satisfaction from catching and eating a fat rattlesnake. Considering the conditions

Florida's Gold Coast Clubs Said Now 'Clip Joints'

Washington — (UPI)—The chief of Miami's Crime Commission told Senate investigators today that strip joints had replaced houses of prostitution on Florida's Gold Coast. He said they get away with abuses police would never have tolerated in the old days.

Daniel T. Sullivan, operating director of the nonofficial Crime Commission, said the modern day strip-tease house has degenerated into a "clip joint."

"Frequently in such places," Sullivan told the Senate crime investigating committee, "the cheating of customers, padding of bills, robbery of patrons, substitution of drinks, and the vicious exploitation of patrons who became senselessly intoxicated under a relentless system of solicitation, is the rule rather than the exception."

Sullivan testified as the committee moved toward a conclusion of its investigation into the connection between the American Guild of Variety Artists and hoodlum-controlled night clubs.

Sullivan charged that conditions at the "clip joints" could not exist without the knowledge of the police. He said agents of AGVA visited night clubs in Miami and talked with members who are entertainers. He said the union apparently did nothing to alter conditions "so blatant that only blind men could fail to see" how entertainers are used.

He said the establishments were controlled by racketeers but operated with an air of legitimacy partly because they employed girls who were members of AGVA.

"There has been nothing done to my knowledge by the union," Sullivan said, "to withdraw its members from these clubs or to take any action within the union power to correct these flagrant abuses."

Sullivan said Miami area strip-tease houses had become centers of vice and prostitution rackets. This new aspect of vice is more vicious, by far, than the old time houses of prostitution, he said.
