

Empire Seen in Heart of Alaska

Washington—(AP)—Creation of a mighty industrial empire in the heart of Alaska with the entire free world as its market was foreseen Wednesday in a report to the Army Engineers.

The report, prepared by Development and Resources Corp., New York, strongly recommends construction of the proposed $1.3 billion Rampart dam on the Yukon river to supply cheap electric power for the industries.

The location of aluminum and other electro-processing industries in Alaska to serve U. S., Japanese and other markets would automatically follow, the report predicted.

The New York firm which produced the report, not yet released by the Army, is headed by Gordon R. Clapp and David E. Lillenthal, both former chairmen of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"A decision to move ahead soon with the Rampart project will prove nationally prudent, wise and desirable," Clapp said in a letter accompanying the report to the district engineer in Anchorage, Alaska.

Rampart dam, which would be located 100 miles north of Fairbanks almost at the geographical center of the state, would create a lake larger than Lake Erie.
