Shirley MacLaine Denies Reports of Trouble in Russia

Moscow (UPI) - Actress Shirley MacLaine today was issued a visa to attend a film festival in Czechoslovakia. She denied reports that there had been difficulties in her travel plans.

"Somebody's making this up," she said when she heard the reports that she had trouble getting the visa.

"It's not true. There's been no delay in the visa. In fact, I got it this morning without even submitting the required passport pictures. Everybody's been very nice."

Miss MacLaine said she would fly to Prague Friday and then go to the Carlsbad Film Festival, to which she has been invited.

The reports of her visa trouble followed an earlier report that she had threatened to dance the can-can naked in Kremlin Square, and that her luggage was stolen.

She denied both these reports, too.

"I am furious, I am furious," she said of the reports. "That quotation is terrible. I have never danced the can-can naked. Why should I want to dance it in Kremlin Square?"

She told newsmen that a pocketbook containing plane tickets, film, some private papers, and a ring belonging to her secretary, Loretta Lee, was missing from the Leningrad hotel she stayed in but she refused to say it had been stolen. The purse contained no money.

She said the dinner party lasted so long she missed the train, then returned to the Astoria hotel to find porters already had carried her luggage from her room, which had been let to someone else in the expectation she would be gone.

"I told the people at the hotel that I had missed the train, that I would take the plane in the morning," she said. "It was then that the porter told me that a pocketbook was missing. I asked him to check the room, but he said there was no mistake. 'I was told the room had been booked for someone else. That's the usual practice.'"

She said Intourist, the Soviet agency handling tourist bookings, was not able to help her at that hour because "it has lots of problems."

She returned to the restaurant and stayed with her dinner guests until about 2 a.m., then talked to friends in the hotel lobby for a few hours, "just to kill time," before going to sleep in a chair.

"I couldn't even get a blanket," she said. She took the plane to Moscow and talked over the mixup with Intourist officials, who were "very upset," she said.

"This is absolutely the first incident of my trip," Miss MacLaine said. "I've had a wonderful time."

SPYING BARRISTER

London (UPI) - Jean Justice, 31, admitted Wednesday that he donned robes and posed as a barrister to enter the old Bailey courtroom to get a good seat for a spy trial.

RECEIVES HOMAGE - Laotian King Savang Vatthana receives homage from a kneeling group of Laotian girls at Vientiane, Laos, as he arrives from the royal capital of Luang Prabang to receive the newly-formed government of three Laotian princes. The new coalition government was due to be presented to the king but bad weather delayed one of the prince's arrival and now the rightwing faction of Laos contends that the new coalition government cannot be launched without the formal approval of the rightwing dominated national assembly.
