MAKES PRINT—Lawrence G. Kersta, Bell Telephone laboratories scientist who is investigating voiceprint identification, speaks into microphone to make a print of his own voice. Spectrograph machine at right will make a print of his voice on the paper-covered drum at bottom. Like fingerprinting, "voice-printing" may someday become standard police practice. (UPI)

New Device Identifies Voice As Individual Characteristic

By JOSEPH L. MYLER United Press International Washington - FBI - Any sensible burglar knows better than to leave his fingerprints behind.

The time may come when he will have to be just as careful about his "voiceprints."

According to Lawrence G. Kersta, acoustics expert of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, voiceprints promise to be almost as good for identification purposes as fingerprints.

Bell scientists have developed a machine called the spectrograph which prints little pictures of a person's voice pattern. The picture comes out of the machine as a batch of wavy lines somewhat resembling a contour map.

Voice experts, with the help of an electronic computer trained to read the pictures, theoretically could pick one voice out of millions, Kersta says.

This suggests the possibility that hidden spectrographs may some day augment the protective devices already being used by banks, art galleries and wealthy households burdened with gold plate and jewels.

A person's voice, according to the Bell labs, is as distinctively his own as his fingerprints. Back in World War II acoustics scientists suggested that enemy radio voices might be identified by spectrogram in order to detect movement of troop units from place to place.

The technique was not, however, highly developed enough to make the scheme practical. Since then more has been learned about the

Jailhouse Lawyer Wins Cut in Bail

Portland - UPI - Lee Edwin Parker, twice convicted of murder, has won a bail reduction in the latest round of court battles waged from a jail cell.

Bail has been reduced from $20,000 to $10,000. Parker has been in jail at either the courthouse or the county jail for 4 1/2 years. He has been twice convicted of second degree murder in the death of Robert Holloway in October, 1957. Holloway's body was found in a well in Vernonia.

Parker, after his first conviction, won a new trial on a Supreme Court order, was convicted a second time and is preparing to appeal his conviction.

He has become known as the dean of jailhouse lawyers.

Buying Power in Portland Said Cut

Portland - UPI - The executive secretary of Oregon's Legislative Interim Committee on local government said Wednesday that overlapping of governments in the metropolitan area here is reducing the buying power of Portlanders by more than $2 million a year.

Richard L. Kennedy, Eugene, told the Portland Chamber of Commerce that reorganization of government in Portland would not only increase the buying power of the people by $2 million, but would also stimulate business expansion greatly.

There is a "direct correlation between business prosperity and orderly urban government," Kennedy said. He urged Portland businessmen to exert leadership in seeking what Kennedy described as badly needed solutions to Portland's urban growth problems.
