Nepal Project Article Subject
Eugene — The University of Oregon's Nepal education project and the report of the project director, Dr. Hugh Wood, university professor of education, were the subject of an article appearing in the New York Times recently. The rapid progress of education in the small Asian kingdom during the period of the university project was noted in the article, which credits the work of Oregon educators. Dr. Wood spent several months of the winter and spring this year in Nepal, under UNESCO, and his report on educational progress was the basis for a return to Bangkok in early June to attend a UNESCO planning conference, which considered future projects. Attention brought to the Nepal report through the Times article was evidenced in letters waiting for Dr. Wood when he returned from the recent conference. Information on the report was re-

Legion Urges Pension Increases for Vets
Seaside — A resolution urging an increase in pensions and disability compensation to veterans of World War I was passed at the Oregon American Legion convention here Friday. It was one of 11 of 41 possible resolutions voted on at the convention. A. C. Friesen of Salem was elected department commander of the Oregon American Legion organization Saturday as the state group ended its annual convention.
