U OF O Invited To Help Sponsor Coming Assembly

Eugene — The University of Oregon will be co-sponsor of a Pacific Northwest assembly early next year which will probe the subject of "Automation and Education."

The regional assembly will be held in cooperation with the American assembly at Columbia University. During the assembly several invited participants from industry, labor, government, and other fields will meet for several days to exchange ideas on automation and education.

The American assembly was founded by Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1950 when he was president of Columbia University. It is a national, non-partisan, educational organization which regularly holds national and local meetings and publishes books on vital current topics.

Publish Report
The final report of the Pacific Northwest assembly will be printed and circulated by the University of Oregon.

Clifford Nelson, executive vice president of the American assembly, will be in Eugene soon to confer with university officials about the Pacific Northwest assembly. Dr. Edwin F. Beal, associate professor of management and an expert on automation, has been named director of the Pacific Northwest assembly. He said the assembly was tentatively scheduled for early February.

This is the second time the University of Oregon has been asked to be co-sponsor of the Pacific Northwest assembly. The first assembly co-sponsored by the university was in December, 1960, and probed the subject of "The Federal Government and Higher Education."

NAME CHANGE DECIDED
South Norfolk, Va. — (UPI) — Voters in two Tidewater Virginia communities to be merged into the nation's second largest city in area decided Tuesday to name the city Chesapeake. The new city of 73,647 population, which becomes official on Jan. 17 with the merger of South Norfolk and Norfolk county, will comprise 344 square miles, ranking in area only behind Los Angeles, with 454.9 miles.
