ORPHANS AIDED - Two of 49 Chinese orphans from Hong Kong are welcomed by actress Jane Russell, left, and WAIF worker Mrs. A. Lee, at Los Angeles. WAIF is an intercountry adoption program of International Social Service that has helped find new parents for more than 10,000 children since it was founded by Miss Russell eight years ago. One-year-old Lai Siu, left, is going to a home in Ohio and Yuknie Lai is going to a home in Palo Alto, Calif. (UPI)

Oregon Supreme Court Decisions

Salem - The Oregon Supreme Court, in a 6-1 decision, said Wednesday that evidence which could be lawfully seized with a search warrant in a suspect's home can also be seized without a warrant upon a lawful arrest.

By so ruling, the court affirmed the rape conviction of Raymond H. Chinn, Portland.

The question involved in Chinn's appeal was seizure of certain items in his apartment.

Going on information supplied by the rape victim, officers went to Chinn's home. He was not home but the officers were admitted by other occupants.

The policemen looked through the apartment and noticed the items in question, in plain sight. Later, when Chinn returned home, he was arrested and without a search warrant - the officers confiscated the items later used as evidence.

Writing the majority opinion, Justice Alfred T. Goodwin said "If there is a bona fide arrest for a known offense and officers make the search as a true incident of the arrest rather than as an effort to discover some grounds for the arrest, then a fairly intensive search may be reasonable, depending upon all the facts of the case."

Goodwin said "This exception is necessary to gather the fruits of the crime, the implements thereof, and possibly to prevent the destruction of evidence thereof."

Justice Kenneth O'Connell dissented. He said the items in question weren't within the class for which the law calls for a search warrant. Also, he said, the officers had previous knowledge of the items and had plenty of time to get a search warrant.

The majority ruling affirmed Multnomah County Circuit Judge J. J. Murchison.

Other decisions:

Slate vs. Edward Everett Cruse, appellant; appeal from Marion county; opinion by Chief Justice William McAllister; Judge George R. Duncan affirmed; conviction of Cruse, of Salem, on a charge of obtaining money and property by false pretenses affirmed.

O. Jay Brogitt and Marjorie C. Brogitt, appellants vs. Doris M. Brown, C. W. Brown, and the state; appeal from Umatilla county; opinion by Justice George Rossman; Judge William W. Wells affirmed; decree partitioning a wheat ranch near Pendleton affirmed.

State vs. David A. Brown, appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice William Perry; Judge Alfred T. Sulmonetti affirmed; Brown's conviction for assault and robbery with a dangerous weapon affirmed.

Hallinan Mackin Lumber Co., Inc. vs. Esquire Lumber Co., appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Gordon Sloan; Judge Alfred T. Sulmonetti affirmed; $2,223 judgment recovered by Mackin Lumber for breach of warranty affirmed.

Phyllis Moore vs. Teddy Moore, appellant; appeal from Union county; opinion by Justice O'Connell; Judge W. F.

Hearing on Rail Merger Continues

Minneapolis, Minn. - The final phase of the Interstate Commerce Commission's hearings on the proposed merger of four western railroads returned here Wednesday after a series of hearings in states affected by the merger.

The applicants, Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Burlington and Seattle, Portland and Spokane railroads, submitted rebuttal testimony, answering the claims made by intervenors in the past two months.

Representatives of those opposing the merger then were permitted to cross-examine witnesses for the applicants.

ICC Examiner Robert Murphy said the hearing would move to St. Paul today if more time were needed.

NO CHEST PROBLEMS

Portland, Ore. - Dagmar, a comedienne noted for her ample proportions, Wednesday offered one woman's view on smoking and cancer. "I smoke heavily," she told a reporter, "but frankly I have never had any trouble with my chest."

Six-Orbit Space Trip Will Seek 'To Plug Holes'

Langley AFB, Va. - Astronaut Walter Schirra will set out on a possible six-orbit space flight in late summer "to plug some holes" before the United States tries to surpass the Russian feat of 17 orbits.

"I'm looking toward it very much. It's what I've been working toward for three years," Schirra told a news conference here following the announcement Wednesday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington.

Longest Venture

A six-orbit flight would be America's longest space venture, doubling the flights of astronauts John H. Glenn, Jr. and Scott Carpenter. Schirra said longer flights were necessary to "give us more time to study the systems" of existing spacecrafts.

"We can't leap from three orbits to 24 hours (18 orbits) without trying to plug some holes," said the 39-year-old Navy lieutenant commander from Hackensack, N. J. NASA does not plan an 18-orbit mission until next year.

NASA officials said the number of orbits would depend on several factors, including the condition of the astronaut during earlier orbits. "Anything more than three orbits should be considered a bonus," said D. Brainerd Holmes, chief of NASA's manned space flight programs.

Probably in September

NASA said Schirra would be rocketed from Cape Canaveral "late this summer." Informed sources placed the probable time in September.

Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper, 36, youngest of the seven astronauts, was picked as Schirra's backup pilot and would assume control of the capsule if something happened to Schirra before blast-off.

Franklin Credited With First Bathtub

New York - The Tile Council of America credits Benjamin Franklin with introducing the first formal bathtub to America.

The Council said Ben's tub "was shoe-shaped and made of copper" - a far cry from the ceramic tile step-down tubs the industry is turning out this year.

Springfield Man Killed in Crash

Eugene - An accident involving a car and two trucks killed a Springfield man here Wednesday afternoon. A Eugene man was critically hurt.

Sheridan M. Hills, 34, a partner in a Eugene television specialty shop, died in a hospital shortly after the accident. Kenneth Gibson, 41, was in critical condition at Sacred Heart Hospital. He suffered multiple fractures.

State police said the two men were riding in a panel truck. Officers said another car apparently sideswiped the small truck, forcing it into the path of a tanker-truck.
