

Kennedy Warns Both Chinas Against Formosa Area Action

Washington—(UPI)—President Kennedy has warned both Chinas—Communist and Nationalist—that the United States will tolerate no military action in the Formosa area.

Hectic Session Boosts Stocks In All Market Groups

New York—(UPI)—Stocks scored their second biggest gain of the year today, exceeded only by the historic session of May 29 when the action was the wildest since 1929.

Trading was hectic in an initial early rallying phase and active for brief subsequent periods when the market added to its gain. High speed tickers were late at the close with stocks around their highs of the day.

DOW JONES AVERAGES
New York—(UPI)—Dow Jones final stock averages: 30 Industrials 557.35, up 20.37; 20 railroads 118.21, up 2.27; 15 utilities 107.08, up 3.15, and 65 stocks 193.91, up 6.05. Sales today were about 5.44 million shares compared with 3.89 million shares Wednesday.

Today's prices on selected stocks:

Allied Chemical	38
Alum. Co. Am.	19 1/2
American Air Lines	19
American Can	42
American Motors	117 1/2
AT&T	104
American Tobacco	31 1/2
Anaconda Copper	40

Kennedy reminded Red Chinas at his news conference Wednesday that the United States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

The President said the United States would take action if there were any Communist assault on Quemoy and Matsu which appeared to threaten Formosa itself.

He said "any threat to the offshore islands" which were not specifically covered in the Chinese-American mutual defense treaty "must be judged in relation to its wider meaning for the safety of Formosa and the peace of the area."

Kennedy noted that this had been President Dwight D. Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

States was pledged to fight to defend Formosa against any Red assault on the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

At the same time he served notice on Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek that the United States still held him to his promise not to take military action against the mainland without U.S. consent.

The double-barreled warning came in the course of a presidential comment on the "very large movements of Chinese Communist forces" into the coastal area opposite the Nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Kennedy said the purpose of the Red moves was "not clear" but there was a possibility of "aggressive action" against the small islands just five miles from Red territory. Formosa lies 100 miles further east.

Eisenhower's position and he said it still enjoyed bipartisan support.

While delivering his warning to the Chinese Communists and reiterating his 1960 campaign statement that there should be no withdrawal from Quemoy and Matsu "under the point of a gun," Kennedy made it clear the United States was not supporting any Nationalist plan for an attack on the mainland.

He said he wanted to emphasize "that our arrangements in this area" where the reinforced U.S. Seventh Fleet constantly patrols "are defensive."

This presumably was intended to quiet any Communist fears that the United States favors any assault on the mainland by the Nationalists.

Kennedy made it clear that he is displeased by the shadow of a sluggish Congress falling across the White House. He said "the Democrats have to do better" in putting across legislation which he considers vital.

Speaking specifically of farm legislation and tax revision, Kennedy said bills of this type must pass at this session "or otherwise we will begin to lose control of our management of our economy, and of our governmental finances."

His news conference remarks mirrored the Chief Executive's growing restiveness about slow congressional action on or defeat of some of his key legislation. He was more explicit than he has been in recent public statements.

As delicately as possible, he seemed to be lighting small fires under his own Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

In addition to urging his own party "to do better," the President also reminded Republicans in Congress that for years Democrats supported the Eisenhower administration on important legislation. He particularly asked GOP support for the foreign trade bill which faces a showdown vote in the House today.

The President said "there is no sense in the Congress going home without taking action on a whole variety of steps which will strengthen our country and our economy."

Foreign Briefs

RUSSIANS ATTEND CHURCH COUNCIL
Nyborg, Denmark—(UPI)—The Russian Orthodox church took part in its first World Council of Churches session here Wednesday.

The Russian church was admitted to the council last year at the WCC Congress in New Delhi.

ITALIAN WORKERS STRIKE OVER WAGES
Rome—(UPI)—More than one million workers were out on strike throughout Italy today.

Printers employed by the nation's major newspapers walked out until next Friday. A 48-hour strike by metal workers in the Fiat Automobile Works in Turin closed the plant. Both strikes were called for wage increases.

MOSCOW ACCUSES NATIONALIST CHINA
Moscow—(UPI)—Moscow radio charged Wednesday night that Nationalist China seeks "direct intervention" against Communist China in the Formosa Strait crisis.

The radio said Communist China, which has been reported massing its troops near the Nationalist-held offshore islands, is an "ally and friend" of the Soviet Union.

SAUDI ARABIAN KING ARRIVES IN VIENNA
Vienna—(UPI)—King Saud of Saudi Arabia arrived here Wednesday for a two week visit with an entourage of bodyguards carrying gold sabres. The king flew here from Rome in a chartered jetliner. He will undergo a complete physical examination by Viennese doctors.

AMERICANS DEPORTED TO SWITZERLAND
Munich, Germany—(UPI)—American jazz trumpeter Chet Baker and drummer Donald Brown were deported to Switzerland Wednesday after narcotics charges against them were dropped.

Baker's German attorney, Rolf Bossi, said the charges were dropped when authorities issued a three-year ban on their re-entry into Germany. Baker underwent treatment for narcotics addiction here after his arrest.

Kennedy To Leave Friday for Mexico
Washington—(UPI)—President Kennedy leaves Friday for Mexico on a visit that should be a social success but one that is bound to involve some sensitive talk about Fidel Castro.

Park Personnel Completes Training
A training school for new summer employees at Crater Lake National park was completed yesterday, according to Marvin Nelson, administrative officer for the park.

Participating as students in the program were seven new seasonal rangers, seven ranger naturalists, and six fire control aides. The training began Monday.

New personnel was shown a variety of films, and heard lectures on equipment care and procedure, park policy, history and service, law enforcement and other topics.

Park Superintendent W. Ward Yeager greeted new employees Monday. Wednesday, they heard talks from a Medford FBI agent and from U.S. Commissioner Frank Van Dyke.

Medford Mail Tribune
Rogue Valley Edition
Page 2-A
MEDFORD, OREGON, THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1962

PRE 4th SALE

SOARING SAVINGS!

Beautiful Shaping in Kerrybrooke Cotton Swimsuits

REGULARS TO 19.99

$7

One and two piece swimsuits that fit and flatter, with shirred elasticized backs, built-in boned bras, Maillot and skirted styles, sarong effects, in scene-stealing prints, woven stripes and plaids, the gayest of summer colors.

Outstanding Values For Only

Just Say "Charge It" on Sears Revolving Charge

WOMEN'S WASHABLE CORDUROY CASUALS

Square toes... in white or black. Rubber soles with soft cushion insoles. Machine washable.

2.99

JUST SAY CHARGE IT!

SIZES 4 1/2 to 9

POINTED TOE CASUALS

Women's casuals in stunning pastel colors. Lilac, Pink, Beige, White or black. Sizes 5 to 9.

2.99

Shop at Sears and Save
Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back

SEARS 501 E. JACKSON ST. | Tues., Wed., Thurs. | Mon. & Fri.
PHONE 773-6661 | 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. | 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

COMPLETE YOUR BEACH ATTIRE WITH KERRYBROOKE ACCESSORIES...

TERRY CLOTH BEACH JACKET White, Soft Absorbent Cotton 3.99

BIG ROOMY BEACH BAG Gaily Colored 1.99

FABER'S

SUPER MARKET

LIMIT RIGHTS RESERVED - FREE DELIVERY

White POTATOES

U.S. No. 1 25 lbs. $1.19

LETTUCE

Each 10¢

CANTALOUPE

7 for $1.00

PEACHES

FRESH lb. 19¢

HONEY GRAHAMS

2 lb. box 69¢

Folger's COFFEE

No. 1 Tins 12 for $1.00

VELVEETA CHEESE

2 lb. loaf 79¢

ORANGE JUICE

12-oz. 3 for $1.00

SALVO

Giant Size 69¢

LEMONADE

12-oz. 5 for $1.00

WIENERS

full pound 49¢

POTATO SALAD

lb. 29¢

ICE CREAM

1/2 gal. 79¢

BOLOGNA

Chunk Style lb. 39¢

FRYERS

lb. 39¢

SAUSAGE