By R. E. NEALON
Mail Tribune Table Rock Correspondent

Table Rock—Ralph Lingenfelter of Portland, who died Sunday morning at the Jess Elder home, was interested in the vermilion mine, now being developed on the top of Lower Table Rock. He with three companions had gone to the mine in a jeep and had just arrived at the mine when he suffered a heart attack. He was taken in the jeep to the Elder home where artificial respiration was applied while a phone call was made for an ambulance. On arrival of the ambulance an oxygen tent was put to work, but death had won the race. We failed to learn the names of Mr. Lingenfelter's companions, but presume they were Portland people.

Fire Causes Scare

A grass fire that started Sunday near the junction of the Modoc and Antioch roads traveled fast and caused quite a little excitement among people in up river area. Ray Ryan, the rancher-realtor, who came near getting singed while trying to get a path around it with his caterpillar tractor, says he was scared worse than anytime in his life. A. C. Allen, Sr. phoned to tell us he was all right, but it would take some time to get over his scare. The flames pushed by a strong wind for a time, were headed toward the Allen buildings, and it required some fast work on the part of those on the fire lines to save them. A. C. has a house close to the river bank, and at times has been threatened by flood waters. We asked him if the flames were worse than the flood waters. He said definitely, yes. The river gives you time to get out while the flames were traveling miles an hour. We remember one time during a flood, A. C. lay fast asleep while the murky waters came under the door, and were gushing under his bed.

The Bray buildings for a time were almost surrounded by fire, but the Bray boys got out a garden hose, and kept the roofs wet, until the wind died down. Some people who saw the fire right after it started thought it was started by a careless cigarette smoker.

Mrs. Gene Moreland, and four children, who have been staying with her parents at the Jess Elder home left Wednesday to join her husband, Staff Sgt. Moreland who is stationed in Guam, with the Air Force.

Cheese Strike

The strike at the Vella cheese factory brings this form of settling disputes closer to home and will mean a lot of surplus milk on farms that have been supplying the cheese factory with milk. Old bossy won't know about the strike and will go on producing.

With all the many strikes in progress, we wonder if it isn't about time for the farmers to put one on. Most strikes are put on because laborers think their product which is labor, is not bringing enough. Much of the time, farmers do not get enough out of their products to pay the cost of production. A farmer told us during the time that so much griping was going on about supports, and farmers were spoken of as the greedy old farmers riding on the gravy train, that we should all close up and take a year's rest. He said this would teach the gripers to have more respect for the people who feed the world. This farmer could have done this because he had a side line, where he really made his money.

Jess Elder has a tin six rattlesnakes since the season opened. One was a vicious specimen who slashed at Elder without giving the usual warning rattle, missed his mark, but was quickly put out of commission by a well-aimed shot from Elders 22 pistol.

Gate Smashed

Last Sunday morning the neighborhood was awakened by barking dogs and prowlers. A pickup truck was driven through one farm, all gates left open, and when the last gate was reached, the pickup was driven through it, smashing the gate, and landing the car in an irrigation ditch where it lay until pulled out by a tractor. The State police located the car owner, who paid damages, but was not the driver of the pickup, having loaned it to a friend. We understand that liquor was involved in this mixup.

Several local telephones were out Tuesday when a truck with a huge log turned turtle on the curve near the Table Rock store. The truck was driven by Jerry Kirklun, who was shook up, but no injuries. He said it happened so quick, he didn't know whether the brakes locked, or the log shifted. The truck was damaged extensively, and when the windshield fell out, the driver came out through the hole where the windshield had been.

We don't have, than to have what we don't appreciate. Thought for the day—It is better to appreciate what

Trailer Houses Restricted

By MARY KELL
Gold Hill — The next regular meeting of Gold Hill city council will be held Monday at 7 p.m. in the council room at the city hall on Second avenue.

Unanimous action during the last regular council session by councilmen accepted a recommendation of the planning commission that henceforth no trailer houses be located in the city as permanent homes except within an approved trailer park.

Siskiyou County July 4 Activities To Center In City of Mt. Shasta

Yreka — Siskiyou County's Fourth of July activities will center in Mt. Shasta this year with fireworks, speeches by elected officials and candidates, a parade, a barbecue, games and square dancing.

Senator Randolph Collier of Yreka, Dr. Max Rafferty, candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Fred Nagel, candidate for Congress from the 2nd District, have been scheduled to speak at the barbecue at Mt. Shasta City Park sponsored by the Operation Fourth committee.

Mrs. S. D. Nelson and Mrs. Harold Chaney, co-chairman of the barbecue, said the barbecue will begin at noon after a parade in downtown Mt. Shasta and will continue to 5 p.m.

Collier will be the keynote speaker and will talk on the Declaration of Independence and the meaning of the Fourth of July celebration. Rafferty, from La Canada, is a candidate for the non-partisan office of state superintendent. Rafferty is to speak on "Patriotism."

Nagel, from Susanville, is to be speaking on the Constitution and Bill of Rights. A rancher and veteran of World War II, Nagel is active in local, county and state affairs.

Mrs. Nelson said the speeches are to begin about 1 p.m. following the parade and downtown activities. The barbecue is to be catered by E. A. Christensen, she said.

The Mt. Shasta Chamber of Commerce is planning an all-day 4th of July celebration program which will begin with a marathon race to the top of Mt. Shasta from the Ski Bowl early in the morning.

A parade through downtown Mt. Shasta is planned from 11 a.m. to 12 noon and the day will conclude with a fireworks exhibition at 9 p.m. that evening. Miss Mt. Shasta is to be selected at a judging at 1 p.m. downtown.

commission that a proposed location for a sub-station at west end of the city park on Southern Pacific property would not be in the best interests of the city and recommended that a location in the west end of the city be better.

Instructed councilman Hilton Brignall, chairman of the police committee, to discuss with Police Chief Earl Cox certain authorities in the city that are not of police nature.

Agreed that the Economy Housing company should be denied a request to have time restriction extended in the housing agreement as it does now out of escrow.

Granted Rev. Mrs. Colburn permission to hold church meetings in her home on Second avenue.

Directed city recorder to write the state health department to explain that the city intends to work on improvement conditions at the sewage plant as funds can be made available.

Dog Owners of Eagle Point Reminded Of Dog Ordinance

Eagle Point — All dog owners in the city of Eagle Point are reminded by city officials that there is an ordinance which forbids dogs to run at large.

This ordinance is especially applicable during the summer months when people are raising vegetable and flower gardens. According to city officials, several complaints have been turned in by residents complaining of dogs getting into their gardens.

Following this reminder, a spokesman for the city said officials would have to start taking drastic measures if the reports continue to come in. This would also apply to non-residents whose dogs are found running at large within the city limits.

GOING TO LOO? OUT

O'Brien — Dennis Bottel, student at Oregon State University and son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bottel of O'Brien will spend this summer at Sanger Peak lookout, forestry department lookout station covering parts of Oregon and California.

BEAUTIFICATION PROGRAM — Pupils in Mrs. Dorothy Velush's fourth grade room at Lone Pine school combined a beautification project with nature study this spring. The 23 pupils began the project early in the spring by cleaning up an area along side the school baseball field—an area that was visible from homes in the area. The boys moved rocks and debris while the girls helped with the weeding and brought in plants, flowers and seeds.

Volunteers Needed

Hornbrook — Volunteers are urgently needed to work at the new little league baseball diamond here this week end. Workers are needed to construct bleachers and continue work on the field that has already been started. Details of the project were announced in last Tuesday's Mail Tribune sports pages.
