155 Students Are Enrolled for Band Camp at College

Ashland — One-hundred and fifty-five students have enrolled for the annual Southern Oregon College Siskiyou Band Camp, according to Glenn T. Matthews, founder-coordinator of the camp. It represents an all-time high, and registration will continue through July 2.

Guest conductor for the camp which lasts through July 13, is Clarence Sawhill, well-known band authority and director of bands at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Along with the regular rehearsals and concerts, which will be held out-of-doors whenever possible, Matthews pointed out that an organized recreational program including sports, attendance at the world-famed Oregon Shakespearean Festival, and trips to near-by points of interest are available.

Featured Outings

One of the featured outings will be an overnight pack trip into the cool high country, led by Dr. Elmo N. Stevenson, college president.

Music opportunities are designed for three levels of instruction: high school division, featuring senior band, ensembles, private lessons, concerts and recitals, basic musicianship, music appreciation, and dance band; the junior division, which in addition to the activities listed above, has been formed into a junior band; and the college and graduate students division, for which both undergraduate and graduate college credit may be received.

Board and room are available in college dormitories, Matthews said.

Additional information concerning Siskiyou Band Camp registration may be obtained from Matthews, or Dr. Herbert Cecil, camp secretary, at the college.

Four Opening Nights Set at Ashland Theater

Ashland—Unlike most theaters, the Oregon Shakespearean Festival in Ashland presents its audiences with four consecutive opening nights.

The "unique" seems to be the rule rather than the exception this year as the Festival company prepares for the July 21 opening of "Comedy of Errors."

Following this premiere, there will be openings of "Henry IV, Part 2," "As You Like It," and "Coriolanus" on the next three evenings.

The "magic" of the stage is no simple task. Weeks of preparation go into each of the four Festival productions. The festival itself is a year-round "labor of love" for many of the organization's board members, directors, manager and producing director.

Production Starts

Production chores started last June 7, when the company formed, and will not cease until the final set is disassembled on the evening of Sept. 2.

Each of the plays has its own prop, staging and costume requirements. This is where the talents of many members of the Festival Technical staff come into full view. The technical department, under the direction of Gene Chesley, will fabricate anything from a shield to a kingly throne or a bucket within the six-week preparation period. Carpenters, painters, and designers work as closely as possible to their plans, in order that the full flavor and impact of the production might be experienced by the audiences.

Other Problems

Varied problems also face the costuming department. Under the direction of Marie Chesley, the costumers are responsible for theatrical portrayal of the attire of each of the characters in all four productions. In addition to adding to the color of the production, costumes help create the proper mood as interpreted by the play's director.

When the trumpets herald the opening of the 22nd season of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival July 21, all will be in readiness for 44 evenings of Elizabethan comedy, tragedy, and chronicle history drama.

Algeria May Hold Referendum in Peace

Algiers, Algeria — (UPI) — The flames of rebellion were flickering out all over Algeria today giving promise that this great North African land will be able to hold its independence referendum in peace Sunday.

The last major organized resistance on the part of European extremists was reported to have collapsed in Oran.

Minimum Police Standards Urged

Salem — (UPI) — Minimum standards for police have not to be set because of what appears to be a "losing battle with crime," the Oregon District Attorneys' Institute was told here Thursday.

H. A. Ellsworth, Eugene police chief, said the existence of such a circumstance in some areas makes upgrading of police standards crucial.

Ellsworth, chairman of the governor's advisory board on police standards, said it is a fact that in some parts of Oregon police get on the payroll with "little or no training."

The board, authorized by the 1961 legislature, includes members at all levels of law enforcement.

Beaverton Chief Of Police Resigns

Beaverton — (UPI) — Police Chief Charles Danforth has announced his resignation. He said the resignation follows no action by the city council on his requests for a higher salary.
