Need More Men

Golden Leaders' awards for outstanding service as a unit leader went to Robert Hawkins, scoutmaster, Troop 7; George Barber, advisor of Post 19; and Wayne Solomon, cubmaster of Pack 73.

Silver Beaver awards for distinguished service to boyhood were presented to James W. Grigsby Jr., Big Pines District commissioner; and Lawrence B. Hastings, institutional representative of the Mt. Zion Lutheran church, Yreka, Calif.

BRITISH SCHOOLGIRL VISITS U. S.

In a competition arranged by the Council for Education in World Citizenship, Miss Suzanne Reeder of Wimbledon, London, won the title of "Schoolgirl of the Year" by writing the winning essay on what contributions she thought Britain could make to world understanding.

Her prize was a three-month visit to the U. S., where she was the British representative, among delegates from countries all over the world, at the 1962 World Youth Forum in New York.

realize that you know very little about the world and the millions of other people who live in it. I'm convinced that understanding would solve all our problems.

"The Malayan girl stayed in London for a few days on her way home, and the French girl is in London for a few months. I am so lucky, because more people stop in London than in Rangoon. So at least I shall see some of my new-found friends again—a comforting thought."

18TH CENTURY RECIPES

People who collect unusual recipes may be interested to know that "Dorset Dishes of the 18th Century," edited by Mr. J. Stevens Cox, F.S.A., has been produced for sale by the Dorset History and Archaeological Society, Dorset, England.

Miss Maureen Samuel, assistant curator of the society, writes:

"The collators, who took the recipes from six original manuscripts, felt that they should be made available to a wider public than they would be if they remained in manuscript form only."

"The handwriting was sometimes faded and difficult to read, which meant that copying the recipes was a job to be done slowly and carefully. The original spelling was retained, a minimum of punctuation added to preserve the sense and, where necessary, unusual terms are explained."

Mr. H. S. L. Dewar, F.R.A.I., in his introduction says: "Turning the first pages of a tattered folio volume of Dorset recipes, bound in wrinkled vellum that looked as if the cooks of a century had rested their pots and pans on it, there was no doubt about the thrill they afforded."

"Here is the recipe to make Whipt Syllabubs. Take a quart of Creme and a pint of renish wine and the juice of 4 lemons sweeten it to your taste and put in some lemon peel; then whip it up with a small rod and put it with a sponge into Syllabub glasses. (from Judith Frampton's Recipe Book, 1708.)"

"The booklet costs 2s. 6d. and is available from the Dorset County Museum, High West St., Dorchester, Dorset, England."
