

RECREATION CENTER—Through the efforts of the Josephine county commissioners, Lake Selmac was formed in a heavily forested area a few miles east of Selma on Highway 199. Work began in the fall of 1960 and dedication ceremonies were held last year.

Lake Selmac One Of Newest Areas For Recreation

By GENEVIEVE BRIGGS

Selma—At the foot of the towering Grayback mountains, encircled by a forest of pine and fir trees lies the newest recreation center of southern Oregon—Lake Selmac.

A lodge is located on the east shore. Host and hostess are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Frost. At the lodge one may purchase groceries, fishing tackle and meals.
Adjacent to the lodge is a trailer park with showers, laundry facilities and sanitary disposal for trailers. Swimming, hiking through the forest, picnicking and boating are some of the activities afforded by the area.

This recreation center is 55 miles from Medford, and three miles east of the Redwood Highway at Selma.

Through the foresight of the Josephine county commissioners, a dream of damming McMullen creek became a reality with the creation of this lake last year.

It is particularly inspiring in the early morning when the first rays of the sun cause it to shimmer like a jewel, and the softly rising mist gives it a resemblance to the lochs of Scotland.

Stocked with rainbow trout, bluegill and bass, it has its own appeal to fishermen.
At present one can drive almost all the way around the lake and can make use of camping grounds complete with sanitary facilities.
Ideal for Families.
Lake Selmac cover 160 acres and is considered ideal for families. Children can splash and play near the shore line without danger.

On the Air

Seattle, Wash. — Today at the fair I watched live television in action and marveled at the patience of cameramen and wondered at the innate antics of fair goers who thought they were on camera.

A Canadian Broadcasting Company mobile unit was touring the fairgrounds, photographing highlights to show to television audiences north of the border. The cameraman was perched precariously atop a van to be above the crowd. Unfortunately a rain storm had blown in over the sound and camera and cameraman were draped in a ghostly plastic gown which kept blowing in front of the lens.

If an uncooperative Mother Nature weren't enough, the human element was as bad. When the crowd discovered the camera's eye upon them, they erupted into a mass of gesturing arms, smirking faces and leaping bodies to get into pictures. I'd like to see how the Seattle World's Fair comes through to Canadian viewers.

Senior Craftsman Branch Will Open Today in Ashland

The Southern Oregon branch of the Senior Craftsman of Oregon Inc. will open today in the Ashland Art Gallery, 31 Water st., Ashland.

The official opening will start at 1 o'clock this afternoon and continue until 9 o'clock tonight.

Robert Onstad, owner of the gallery, will be host. He is manager of the craft shop which will show the best of Oregon craft work. He will be assisted by members and officers of the Rogue Valley Council on Aging which has co-sponsored the project locally.

Several local craftsmen will be represented in the collection of varied craft articles made by hand. The Senior Craftsman of Oregon Inc. headquarters are in Portland and the cooperative organization has more than 400 members. Its crafts are known throughout the nation.

To Be Open Daily
The gallery will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. during July, August and September. Besides the Senior Craftsman articles there will be a continuous art show.

Local residents at least 50 years of age who wish to sell their craft in the shop must pay one dollar of the life membership of $10 in the Oregon Craftsman when they submit their articles to a jury and design committee for approval.

If the articles are accepted, the remaining $9 of the dues may be paid out of sales during the first year. If the articles are not accepted, the dollar is returned.

It was stressed that the membership in the Oregon Craftsman makes a member eligible to sell articles at both the Portland and Ashland stores.

Set Up By Committee
The shop in Jackson county has been set up by the committee on a trial basis only during the peak of the summer tourist season. If successful, it may become an all-year outlet for senior crafts in this area.

During July the receiving committee plans to receive applications and local craft articles each Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon at the Senior Activity center, 601 East Jackson st., Medford, and at the Art gallery in Ashland.

Later in each week the articles will be examined by the jury committee which will also counsel new craftsmen on design and salability of the articles to improve them or accept them, if fully approved, to be consigned to Onstad for sale.

New crafts will be found each week in the shop to take the place of articles sold, council members said.

Additional information may be obtained from the Senior Center during the receiving hours. The center will be closed July 4.
