

British Princess Shies Away From Commoner Match

By MARGARET SAVILLE
United Press International
London — (UPI) — Wanted: one personable, unattached Royal Prince for one personable, unattached Royal Princess.

That isn't an item in the "personal" column of the London Times, but many Britons feel it is a fair statement of the case of Princess Alexandra.

At 25, this slender, blue-eyed princess is Britain's best royal catch. Princess Margaret's marriage to photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones, now Lord Snowdon, left the field to "Alex."

There have been the usual rumors of Princess Alexandra's romantic interest in this peer or that one. Most persistently her name has been linked with the dashing Irish baron, Lord O'Neill.

But the feeling has been growing that while the Princess might not object to — might in fact favor — marrying outside royal ranks, the delayed critical reaction in Britain to Margaret's marriage to a commoner has given both Alexandra herself and the royal family pause.

Relinquish Rank

The princess could, upon a non-royal marriage, relinquish her royal rank. But this would not be likely to please her mother, the Princess Marina, widow of the Duke of Kent, who died in a wartime plane crash.

Princess Marina is a proud descendant of the Imperial Russian royal family and of the royal houses of Greece and Denmark.

She is much too fond of her only daughter to force her into an unhappy marriage, nor would she stop Alexandra from marrying the man of her choice — whoever he might be — in a situation of true love.

But at the same time Marina would much prefer her daughter to remember her royal birth and make a match with one of Europe's royal and eligible males.

Enjoys Tours

Alexandra has a supreme talent for meeting people and a zest for royal tours abroad, which she finds highly enjoyable. It she gave up her royal status for marriage with a commoner, the Princess would be "out of things" in the sense of royal activity and the dull round of domesticity might soon pall on her. No one is more aware of this, according to persons who know her, than the Princess herself.

Finland is about the size of Minnesota and Mississippi combined, and it is one of the world's northernmost countries. Nearly a third of it extends beyond the Arctic circle.
