

Local and Personal

Fire Put Out - Firemen extinguished a fire in a trash barrel in the 1100 block of North Central ave. about 7:45 a.m. today. They said that the barrel was too close to a building and grass.

Dinner Planned - Grants Pass, Medford, and Ashland chapters of the National Association of Retired Civil employees will hold a potluck dinner in Grants Pass Wednesday, July 11, at noon. Those attending should take some item of food and table service. Those needing transportation may call Edwin Eggers, 773-4376, or A. E. Hutchinson, 773-5823.

Car Entered - A car owned by Rich McDowell, Central Point, was broken into during the week end, the owner told state police Monday. Thieves cut the top of the sports car convertible and stole the chrome gear shift, he said.

Dead Fish Found - A pile of dead fish just off the River rd. out of Shady Cove was reported to state police during the week end. Officers say the fish might have been dynamited.

Grange To Meet - Griffin Creek Grange will meet Thursday, July 12, at 8 p.m. Mrs. C. V. Calkins and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smith will be in charge of refreshments.

Picnic Planned - The annual Montana state picnic will be held in the Grants Pass city park Sunday, July 15. Luncheon will be served at noon, with coffee, beverages, and ice cream furnished. Those attending should take table service and an article to be sold at a white elephant sale.

Presented Award - Fred Lyon, parts sales manager for Crater Lake Motors, Inc., has been presented the first annual Golden Circle award by Ford division of Ford Motor company. The award is based on accomplishments in managerial responsibilities. The winner received a certificate of qualification and a coat lapel gold pin.

Family Council

Editors note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counselors and social workers. Edited by Mrs. Alma Benn. (Copyright by General Features Corp.)

Mrs. I. B. - He refuses to entertain his brother on the campus.

Jeffrey B. - He should make friends with kids his own age.

Mrs. I. B. - We have two sons, six years apart in age. The older one, Jeff, is 21 and is remaining at college over the summer to earn credits toward a graduate degree in fine arts. Since our younger boy has no special plans, we've asked Jeff to invite him up to the Maine campus for a week, or at least a long week end. Ronny was up there two years ago with my husband and me, and loves the place. But Jeff says no. He thinks we're just pampering Ronny by letting him get away from home.

The truth is that Ronny is at an awkward stage. He's too old for camp and loves to be among adults and older students. Most of the kids his age bore him. He's extremely bright, an A student. We feel he'll find just the right group of friends when he's older. Meanwhile, Jeff should help us add to his contacts and experiences.

Jeffrey B. - Ronny insists on ignoring all the attractions which are right in his own back yard. Distant hills look green to him, especially the ones around me. The truth is he's snobbish toward most of the kids in the neighborhood and he has no reason to be. He's brainy, yes, but he can learn plenty from them, even if they don't get A's. They know how to be friendly and how to fill their time pleasantly. They don't walk around moping with a long face on them, like Ronny.

What gets me is the way my parents fall for his big act. He's unhappy at home, he has no friends, he has nothing to do. Boohoo. So what? So send him up. Jeff will cheer him up. They're also planning to send him to Virginia to visit our uncle, and maybe to Canada for a French course. They should force him to join in with the teen-agers at home instead of being so standoffish.

The Council: Jeff knows all the rules. Now he must learn about the legitimate exceptions. In general, yes, a teenager should hobnob with teenagers. Most of them do. But occasionally one of them, for a psychologically valid reason, is a holdout. We believe this is true of Ronny and that his deviation from the norm is a temporary one, not an ingrained isolationism.

In finding some justification for Ronny's dim view of local pickins, we point out to Jeff the circumstances which may make his brother a "special case." Being a 5-year-young brother, he's grown up to the tune of advanced and adult conversation. He's always been at home with older age groups. This, in turn, may have made him rather poor company for his contemporaries.

Who knows but that his early efforts at joining in, at becoming one of the guys, met with rebuff. He may have been hurt and discouraged from trying to "crash" groups where the only common bonds (for him) were age and neighborhood. It isn't necessarily snobbish which makes Ronny keep his distance. It may well be self-protection. And forcing him to mix locally, as Jeff suggests, might result in further emotional hurts and really turn him antisocial.

No, we agree with Mrs. B., who hopes that Ronny will enrich his social sense through far-ranging personal contacts during this period of his life when his peers and he may not see eye to eye mentally and emotionally. By the time Ronny reaches college age, two factors will ease his way socially. First, glaring differences in height, weight, tastes and talents aren't as conspicuous on a college campus as on a high school playground. Second, there's a varied ingathering of young people, providing a wide choice of friends; attachments occur through similarities of outlook and enthusiasms, crossing lines of age and background.

Ronny will find his comfortable niche in a few years. Meanwhile Jeff should cooperate in permitting him to fish for social experiences from a larger pond than runs past his front door. The important thing is that he learn how to enjoy a group. It doesn't matter where.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A FATHER wandered into the kitchen late one night and found a persistent and—in the father's eyes—utterly undesirable suitor of his daughter chewing on a succulent turkey leg. "Tell me," rasped the father, "what other kinds of work do you do besides cleaning out refrigerators?"

Mr. Thompson came home from the office one evening with a horrendous tale of the lunch he had eaten. "The restaurant looked inviting," he said, "so I tried it for a change. Sure enough, the soup, salad, and beef were delicious. But the pie was inedible and the coffee was stoup. Do you know what I discovered? The place had changed hands right in the middle of my meal."

A young man who was making quite a name for himself in a Western TV series ruined everything by resorting to an analyst's couch. Now, reports Hank Grant, every time the sheriff asks him, "Which way did the varmint go?" our hero bursts into tears and cries, "I'm not sure, I'm not sure."

One of Old Deerfield's thurifist citizens bore the quaint name of Consider Dickinson. Consider paid his serving maid the princely wage of one dollar a week. Then he found she was saving money on it. So he married her.

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

Hodgepodge in the news: In Washington, the big question is whether or not to cut taxes (meaning federal taxes) and if so WHEN. A tax cut is endorsed by such oddily-mated organizations as the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the AFL-CIO.

At his news conference, President Kennedy said he will stand by his intention to wait until next year for a general tax reduction. The AFL-CIO says he is dead wrong in not asking for it RIGHT NOW.

The AFL-CIO statement adds: "The economy is not responding as it should. Everything looks bad and nothing looks good."

WHY a tax cut? The theory is that it will leave more money in the people's pockets for the people to spend. If the people spend more money, the theory goes, business will get better and there will be more jobs.

SOMETHING to think about: A tax cut will also INCREASE the NATIONAL DEBT if we don't stop spending and putting it on the cuff. The conservative viewpoint: SPEND LESS, and then in time we can safely TAX LESS.

A RUGGED moment came the other day to Mrs. Edmund Brown, wife of California's governor, when she discovered while riding with her husband in a motorcade of cars carrying delegates from the Governors Conference at Hershey, Pa., to nearby Independence Hall in Philadelphia to listen to President Kennedy's speech, that she had left her money and her valuables behind at the hotel in Hershey. The Hershey police were notified and they hastened to the hotel, but found the dresser drawer where she had left them EMPTY.

IT HAD a happy ending. An AIDE to Governor Brown (a REAL aid, let's add) had frisked the room, including the dresser drawers, found the valuables and took them to Philadelphia for safe keeping.

It's aides like that that are worth while.

FROM Wichita Falls, Tex.: A 100-pound blonde, waving a spike-heel shoe like a war club, sent a 215-pound wrestler to the hospital with lacerations that required several stitches to close. The blonde was a young woman named Sue McFarland. She said the wrestler had pinched her.

So she waylaid him outside his dressing room and bushwhacked him with the deadly shoe when he came out.

KIPLING was apparently right. The female of the species IS more deadly than the male. Especially, since the advent of the spike-heeled shoe.

Funeral Tuesday For E. W. Brown; Former Plumber

Funeral services for Emmett W. Brown, 70, of 121 Genessee st., who died Saturday, will be held at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Peril Funeral home. Officers of the Medford Masonic lodge will officiate. Entombment will follow in the Medford IOOF mausoleum.

Mr. Brown, the son of George Brown and Adeline Tibbetts, was born on Jan. 13, 1892, in St. Joseph, Mo. He came to Medford from Port Angeles, Wash. in 1918 and worked as a plumber for various plumbing shops. In 1940, he opened his own plumbing business at 339 Mae st., known as Brownie's Plumbing. Later he moved the shop to 519 Crater Lake ave. and retired in 1957.

He was a member of the Port Angeles Elks lodge, the Medford Masonic lodge, and the Crater Lake chapter, Royal Arch Masons. He was a life member of the Malta Commandery Knights Templar, Medford Consistory Scottish Rite and the Hilar Temple Shrine.

On Feb. 21, 1931, in Klamath Falls, he was married to Fern I. Lewis, who survives. Other survivors include one sister, Mrs. Harry Ebert, Yakima, Wash.; two nephews, S. H. Ebert, South Bend, Ind. and W. E. Ebert, Tacoma, Wash.

Honorary pallbearers will be A. C. Leighton, Lewis Jantzer, Henry Enders, Chester Hubbard, Paul Lea and J. H. Creager. Active bearers will be Charles Bottjer, Howard Bush, A. K. Morse, Joe Jorgensen, Ray Frisbie and Les Taylor.

Kennedy Warned Racial Order May Reduce Housing

Washington - (UPI) - The National Association of Home Builders has told President Kennedy that an executive order barring racial discrimination in housing could cause a 75 per cent drop in new home construction.

Association President Leonard L. Frank said Sunday a survey showed 51 per cent of the builders believed the anti-discrimination order would force cutbacks if it applied to Federal Housing Administration, Veterans Administration, and privately financed housing. Forty two per cent predicted a decline if the order applied only to FHA and VA financing, he said.

Of the builders expecting a cutback, Frank reported, one third predicted it could be as deep as 75 per cent.

A total of 5,905 of the 15,335 members of the association replied to the survey. Frank offered Kennedy a plan designed to help lessen the impact of the proposed federal order.

He suggested that the White House organize "a major, nationwide education campaign to lessen tensions over housing discrimination."

Kennedy told his news conference Thursday he would sign the non-discrimination order at a "useful and appropriate time."

Frank said he felt a national program could develop greater public awareness of the significance and consequences of housing discrimination. He said it also could stimulate means of "improving community acceptance of changing living patterns."

Sen. Byrd Breaks With U.S. Chamber

Washington - (UPI) - Sen. Harry F. Byrd, a former member of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce board, has publicly broken with the organization, terming its call for a tax cut "dangerous and patently."

Byrd, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Sunday questioned whether the Chamber's stand on the tax cut had the backing of the membership.

In a letter to President H. Ladd Plumley, Byrd said he was inviting state Chambers of Commerce "to comment" on the action.

Byrd, a long time budget watchdog, said the Chamber's call for an immediate tax cut in the upper and middle income brackets would cost the government $9.5 billion in revenues annually.
