

Australian Shopping For False Eyelashes of Mink

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York —(UPI)— Pamela Quinn, top-rated model from Australia, breezed into New York with the announcement that: One of the first things she will shop for is a set of phoney eyelashes made of mink, "a status symbol with us models in Sydney."

Food prices in the United States stagger her, especially the price of steak which is cheap in her homeland. Everyone in the United States is just as friendly as the folks back home.

Six Months Later
If she doesn't get to visit the Statue of Liberty she will be "terribly cross".

Every girl in Australia copies what the American girl is wearing, but gets around to the "new" in hairdos and makeup about six months after they've caught on here.

And the modeling profession is looking up for girls from the land down under.

Miss Quinn, 20, is a wisp of a girl, she stands five feet, five and one-half inches tall, but weighs only seven stone — translation: 91 pounds. She has huge blue eyes, wide forehead, fair skin, and red hair. She also has a tremendous sense of humor and is a conversational whiz. Of her size she laughed, "We make 'em small in Australia." Of U.S. prices, she decided "If I lived here, I'd have to marry one of your Texas millionaires."

Miss Quinn was named photographic model of the year in votes by stores, advertising agencies and magazines. As a result of her winning, she is getting the trip to the United States with stops in Honolulu, San Francisco and New York, has an Australian-designed wardrobe made of fibers of Celanese, one of her sponsors, and is in between sight-seeing being photographed against backgrounds of tourist attractions in this country for use later in Australian newspapers and magazines.

Accompanying her on a visit which lasts until August 1, are Laurence Le Guay, professional photographer, and Alan Bruce, president of a Sydney agency which handles advertising in Australia for Celanese's export operation.

The model said that the pay for an Australian model is "atrocious" compared to rates in the United States where a topflight photographer's model may earn $60 an hour. But she pointed out that the Australian pound goes farther than the U.S. dollar, and that her average earnings of 80 pounds per week, approximately $160, is comparable to that of a top-flight executive.

Camp Fire Girls Hold Ceremony in Eagle Point

Eagle Point—A summer grand council fire was held by Camp Fire Girls and Blue Birds in the Eagle Point district this year for the first time. The annual awards program is usually planned to take place before school is out. Due to weather conditions this spring, many of the girls were unable to complete outdoor requirements for some of the ranks, therefore the later date was set.

A background of greenery and candlelight in the new Scout-Community building was the setting for the ceremony.

Miss Lana McGraw was guest mistress of ceremonies. Miss McGraw is a junior attending the University of Oregon. She had been a member of the charter Camp Fire Girl group in Eagle Point, and had been instrumental in organizing the charter Horizon club in Medford, the first in Rogue Camp Fire Girls Council.

Blue Birds lighting the seven blue candles, symbolic of the seven points in the Blue Bird wish, were Susan Short, Karen Greb, D'Anne Cattanaeh, Alyce Krambeul, Susan Cox, Wendy Vaughan and Debra Lay.

Camp Fire Girls lighting the candles for work, health and love, were Margy Martin, Beth Caster and Regina Krambeul.

Candy sale awards, for selling 12 units, were received by Carol Ann Chapman, Judy Draper, Margy Martin and Connie Shelton. Blue Birds receiving the same award were Susan Short, Karen Greb, Debra Lay, Alyce Krambeul, Michelle Vannice and D'Anne Cattanaeh. Awards went to Vicki Vaughan and Lynn Bedingfield for the sale of 20 units. Patti Morrison earned an award for 30 units.

Three year awards were presented to Vicki Vaughan, Judy Draper, Margy Martin, Mary Stinger, Sandra Meyer and Terri Arens. Membership awards for five years were given to Karen Arens, Connie Shelton and Lynn Bedingfield.

Swimming awards were: Pattiwoog to Connie Shelton and Lynn Bedingfield; frog, to Tanya Bedingfield and fish to Vicki Vaughan.

Mrs. LeRoy Bedingfield was presented with a leaders award for six years of service to the organization. Mrs. Bedingfield has served this time in the capacity of Camp Fire Girl guardian. She has helped some of her girls through three ranks of the program.

Mrs. Merle McGraw, committee of awards for the district, presented the rank certificates. Awarded the rank of trail seeker was Margy Martin, Terri Arens, Judy Draper, Connie Conrad, Mary Stinger, Sandra Meyer and JoAnne McCracken.

Woodgatherers' certificates went to Vicki Vaughan, Karen Arens, Connie Shelton and Lynn Bedingfield.

The third rank of fire-maker was earned by Nancy

Arens and Tanya Bedingfield. Extinguishing the candles of work, health and love, were Mary Stinger, Georgia Clarke and JoAnne McCracken.

"I know I am, and hold within me the promise of the future," recited Tanya Bedingfield and Nancy Arens as they repeated the Credo of the Camp Fire Girls. The ideals of the organization were given as the two girls spoke the words from memory.

Arising from the circle around the fire, all the girls left the darkened auditorium bearing lighted torches, as they sang the "Recessional".

Mrs. Keith Krambeul was piano accompanist, and leaders Mrs. Bedingfield, Mrs. William Short, Mrs. LeRoy Draper and Mrs. Marshall Caster planned the council fire and served the refreshments following.
