WHY IS EVERYBODY SO FRIENDLY ALL OF A SUDDEN?

Think and a type of the puzzle that is to be solved.

Engine Crew Visited Bars, Witnesses Say

Missoula, Mont. (UPI)—Five witnesses testified Wednesday the engineer and fireman of the Northern Pacific's North Coast Limited frequented a series of taverns before boarding the passenger train which derailed north of here.

The five were among 13 witnesses who appeared at the opening day of an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing into the wreck of the deluxe passenger train at high speed. It killed a child and injured more than 200 persons.

Mrs. Gayle White, a 22-year-old ranch wife, said she talked with engineer Eldon Lynn of Missoula at a Hot Springs bar. She said his speech was slurred, his voice was thick and he staggered when he walked.

Didn't Have To Steer

Mrs. White said she advised Lynn to "go home and sober up." She quoted him as replying, "We don't have to steer it (the train) — just push the buttons. I could do it in my sleep."

On cross examination by Lynn's lawyer, Mrs. White admitted she had consumed three drinks of whiskey at the time she met Lynn.

Another witness, Sanders County Deputy Sheriff Richard J. Cole, said he had known Lynn three years and that the engineer had "a reputation for being a consistent drinker." He said Lynn showed signs of drinking the night before the wreck.

Lynn and fireman Jerry Haines of Missoula boarded the train at Paradise, Mont., about 60 miles west of Missoula. The train wrecked on a mountain grade about 14 miles from Missoula.

Beer Said Served

Charlotte Hermiston, a Paradise bartender, said she served Lynn and Haines two rounds of beer. She said Haines bought a six-pack of beer and took it with him from the bar.

Rebuttal witnesses called by Haines' attorney, Jay Kurtz, included Mrs. Lander Brass, Haines' sister-in-law, who testified she doubted Lynn and Haines had been drinking heavily.

Earlier, the conductor of the ill-fated passenger train, Fred L. O'Brien, testified that as far as he could tell no running air-brake test of the train was made before it started down the hill.

O'Brien said the train seemed to be going faster than normal before it started the descent. However, he said he made no attempt to pull the emergency brake cord because "I didn't think there was an emergency."

Survey Reveals Church Precepts Are Not Followed

By CLAIRE COX
United Press International
New York—(UPI)—A "tremendous difference" has been found between the Methodist church's historic stand against alcohol and the actual practices and beliefs of many of its members.

"Do we practice what we preach?" asks Lee C. Moorehead, professor of preaching and worship at St. Paul School of Theology in Kansas City, Mo.

His answer, when it comes to drinking and gambling, is "No."

Moorehead reported in the Methodist magazine Together on a survey made of the Asbury Methodist church of Prairie Village, a suburb of Kansas City. With a population of 27,000, it is the seventh largest city in Kansas.

The church, with 1,700 members, represents in its membership a "cross-section of American Methodism," Moorehead said, and "most probably typifies substantially the situation facing contemporary Methodism."

Members of the church were themselves startled by some of the results of the survey, Moorehead said, particularly on the subject of alcohol. Here are some of the replies:

—85 per cent of the men and 74 per cent of the women said they sometimes drank alcoholic beverages despite the Methodist church's historic stand favoring total abstinence.

—56 per cent of the men and 46 per cent of the women said they did not believe serving alcoholic beverages in the home had an adverse effect on children.

Despite the Methodist stand against gambling, 38 per cent of the men and 55 per cent of the women said they sometimes made wagers, participated in baseball pools or

Missionaries Finish Translation of Book

New York—(UPI)—The first English translation of the "Al-Kutab al-Aqdas," or "Most Holy Book" of the Bahai religion has been completed by two Presbyterian missionaries.

The work was done by Dr. Earl E. Elder of Philadelphia, an Arabic scholar who retired in 1955 after serving in Egypt for 40 years, and Dr. William McE. Miller, also of Philadelphia, who will retire in December after serving in Iran since 1919.

Trumpet Trio To Be Featured at Concert

Ashland—A trumpet trio will be featured at tonight's concert in Lithia park when James Maffett, Roy Taylor and Herbert Bell will play Agostini's composition "The Three Trumpeters."

Dr. Herbert Cecil will direct the city band in its weekly program at the Butler Memorial band shell.

The concert begins at 7:30 p.m., and will include popular selections and one group for community singing.

Runaway Financier Indicted by Jury

New York—(UPI)—Runaway financier Edward M. Gilbert has been indicted by a New York grand jury on charges of stealing $1,953,000 from the E. L. Bruce Co., District Attorney Frank Hogan announced Wednesday.

The grand jury returned a 12-count indictment, each count for a check Gilbert drew on the Bruce accounts before his flight to Brazil. The checks, Hogan said, were used to meet margin calls in the slumping stock market, otherwise gambled. To the question "Do you consider gambling of any type a matter of morality?" the reply gave "no" answers by 58 per cent of the men and 50 per cent of the women.

"Though the Methodist church has consistently condemned all forms of gambling it is plain that the large majority of the members of this church is not in sympathy with such a position," Moorehead said.

Accept Negroes

On another major question, Moorehead expressed surprise, but approvingly, the congregation responded overwhelmingly in favor of acceptance of Negro teachers in the public schools and Negro membership in the church.

"Prairie Village is a solid white community," he said. "These replies are surprising in the face of the commonly held assumption that people have fled to the suburbs — in part — to escape racial mixing, and would therefore be deeply opposed to having non-white neighbors. Is this assumption based on fact? Have church people been more deeply influenced by Christian pronouncements on race than we have given them credit for?"

"Possibly there are in these replies hopeful signs of a more Christian response to racial issues than we have dared to anticipate. Granted that these percentages might suffer revision in the face of an actual challenge, do they not also offer real encouragement to those who would plan thoughtfully and carefully for the eventual welcoming of non-white residents into suburban communities?"

Varied Food Found In Fiftieth State

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press International
San Francisco—(UPI)—A "treasure trove" of varied food is on restaurant menus in Hawaii.

You can even eat like royalty at a modest-looking Japanese restaurant at Honolulu. This village is about eight miles up mauka (to the hills) from the Kona coast on Hawaii, largest island in the fiftieth state.

Chef Ate Uchida at Teshima's is so highly regarded that Prince Takamatsu, younger brother of the present Japanese emperor, made a special trip to the restaurant during a visit to Hawaii a few years ago. Uchida came to the restaurant as a cooking instructor to train the staff for the Hawaiian-Japanese owner, Mrs. Mary Teshima.

His specialties include Tokyo-style shrimp tempura, shellfish split into butterfly shape and battered-fried to lacy crispness. Sashimi is another, made with meaty, flavored fresh raw tuna. Bite-size pieces of tuna are arranged as artistically as a still-life painting with shredded white radish and pieces of cucumber, to be eaten with mustard-soy sauce dip.

Su no mono, or salads, also look like pictures on plates. Guests unfamiliar with these and other Japanese foods can preview their selections at a case of realistic plaster models or ask a waitress to describe each dish. Some salads contain land and sea foods—vegetables and fish, eel or shellfish. Seaweed and bean curd, made from soy beans, are widely used. The former looks like dark spinach but has a distinctive sea flavor. Bean curd is a mild, firm custard.

The menu also includes sukiyaki, the meat and vegetable hot main dish known to many mainlanders. Uchida's version is less highly seasoned with soy sauce than most.

"It's like using ketchup with American food," said the chef, with Mrs. Treshima interpreting. "A poor chef uses too much soy to hide his mistakes."

Another Big Island restaurant, the Lunch Box at Kamuela, on the northern highway between Hilo and Kailua, specializes in Japanese box lunches. Typical lunches include sushi, the Japanese equivalent of an American sandwich lunch. This is sweet-sour cold rice, wrapped in seaweed or a thin, golden brown omelet. Usually the rice is packed solidly around bits of meat, seafood or vegetables, or a combination of two or more. Tempura, deep-fried foods, may also be included, along with a peppery relish, kimpire gobo, which tastes good with bland sushi. It is made with shoestring-sliced burdock, a root vegetable. Fine French food is daily fare at the newest luxury hotel on another island, Kauai, north of Oahu. Chef George Berton of Hanalei Plantation prepares French dishes with island touches.

Broccoli hollandaise becomes broccoli sauce mikado, with grated orange rind added to a basic hollandaise sauce of butter, lemon juice and egg yolks. French crepes, or pancakes, appear at breakfast with poha jam, made from a local fruit like ground cherries. Fried sliced taro, a root vegetable, is a substitute for fried potatoes with mahimahi, fish-fleshed dolphin—the fish, not the mammal.
