Automatic Call Accounting Records Information on DDD

(Editor's note: This is the last in a series of four articles on direct distance dialing, the new long distance service due in Medford July 15.)

Pacific Northwest Bell will introduce a new employee—an electronic one—to its Medford customers when direct distance dialing service begins here July 15.

The name of this new member of the Medford telephone family is Mr. AMA—that's short for Automatic Message Accounting.

AMA, according to Manager J. H. Creager, is an electronic accounting system made possible by equipment developed in the Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric company.

This equipment records all the information about a long distance call placed by direct distance dialing. It then processes this information at the point of printing a monthly bill for DDD calls that the company's customers place in Medford.

Average Weekly Pay Sets Record

Washington - (UPI) - The weekly pay of the average U.S. factory worker climbed to a record high of $97.03 in June, the Labor Department reported today.

It said the number of workers on non-farm payrolls increased by about a half million to a record peak of 55,654,000.

The average factory work week - regarded as a key economic indicator - failed to show its usual mid-summer advance, however.

Working hours in manufacturing plants averaged 40.8 hours last month, an increase of only six minutes. The work week usually expands by three of four times that amount in June.

Boys Uninjured As Boat Explodes

Portland - (UPI) - Two 15-year-old boys escaped serious injury when their 18-foot boat exploded and burned here Thursday.

The boys are Loren Hegar and Gordon Higby, both of Portland. The explosion occurred on the Willamette river near the Sellwood bridge.

The boys swam to safety. Police said the explosion came as a result of a backfire in the boat's fueling system.

equipment goes through a great number of steps, each of which is checked and rechecked to minimize error. Briefly, this is what happens:

When a customer dials a long distance call, one of three automatic recorders in the central office goes into action. This recorder punches holes in a three-inch wide tape. These punched holes are a code which records the number of the telephone calling and being called, the start and completion time of the call, the area code number (if the call is outside the state), and another code which identifies each separate call.

Help of Operator
"As capable as Mr. AMA is, he needs the help of an operator on some DDD calls," Creager said. "These are DDD calls dialed by Medford customers with four or eight-party lines. An operator will be connected to the line in the brief seconds before the distant phone rings to say just three words: 'Your number, please?'"

The operator taps out the Medford phone number on a set of push buttons, then touches a special button, which sends the information to Mr. AMA. By this time the customer will hear the distant phone ringing, just as he would on a local call.

Once each day, at 3 a.m., the tapes are cut and made ready for shipment to the AMA processing center.

Produces Punch Cards
On arrival at the AMA center, the three Medford tapes are spliced together and run through a series of machines to produce IBM punch cards. One card results for each telephone call recorded on the tape.

Then when it comes time for the monthly bills, these cards are used to print a statement of the direct distance dialing calls placed by each customer during the past month. These statements are included with regular monthly bills mailed out from the company's Oregon accounting office in Portland.

PAPER TAPE - The heart of direct distance dialing record-keeping is this tape perforating machine. Jim Skog, central office equipment man in Medford, examines the results of test calls made by the thousands to prepare for July 15, the date DDD comes to Medford.
