

Friends Church Scene Of Recent Ceremony

Central Point — Miss Patricia Helen Kime, 1614 Seaside avenue, became the bride of Richard Warren Sparks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Sparks, 132 Almond street, Medford, in a ceremony held June 30 at Medford Friends church.

Pastor Clayton Crisman officiated at the 8 o'clock evening rites attended by 100 relatives and friends. The bride's parents are Mrs. Velma Kime and Gerald E. Kime, both of Central Point.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white tulle with a fitted bodice, long sleeves, and a scalloped neckline.

The satin skirt, which formed a train in back, had a lace panel in front and outlined two satin side panels. Her shoulder length veil was held by a crown of crystals and she carried a bouquet of white carnations encircling a lavender orchid.

Miss Sandra Renfrow was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. James S. Fawcett and Mrs. James D. Pool, both of Medford. They wore tulle and lace frocks fashioned with full pleated skirts and matching picture hats and shoes. Miss Renfrow's frock was light lavender with the other attendants' dresses in a darker shade. They all carried bouquets of white carnations with lavender streamers.

Candlelighters were Miss Sally Sparks, sister of the bridegroom, and Dean Fields.

Variety Shown In Fall And Winter Fashions

New York —Variety is the spice of fashion's way of life for fall and winter.

Three big names of the design world closed out the New York Couture Group's press week for visiting reporters Friday with an offer of something for every woman.

Designer Norman Norell, considered by some a fashion critic, the No. 1 voice of American fashion, produced a new little boy look complete with Eton or sailor caps and small homburgs for his models.

The little boy look featured brief jackets, sometimes piped in contrasting colors, with stark tailoring always a feature. The models' hair styles—short, almost shingled, and plastered to the head—added to the boyish look of the clothes.

Warmth in Suits Norell offered a wide variety of suits including winter types meant to go through a cold spell without the additional bulk of a topcoat. These were made of coating fabrics. The jackets were lined in quilted lambs' wool and trimmed with fur.

Jersey suits actually were combinations of sleeveless dresses, with easy, belted sweater-like jackets. Norell's

Designers Jane Derby used a minimum of trimming in a collection she called "the most understated one I've ever done." She introduced a V-silhouette, showing simply as a V-neckline on a black velvet dress, or more elaborately, as a huge V of leopard on the front bodice of banker's gray flannel. Sleeves came to the wristbone on many day costumes.

Degree Event Set Saturday By Masons

The Royal Arch Masons of Southern Oregon will hold their annual outdoor degree event at the Folding Hills ranch on Rogue river, above McLeod, July 21.

It will start with a no-host dinner being served at 6 p.m. This will be followed by the degree work at 7:30 p.m.

Each year Ashland, Jacksonville, Grants Pass and Medford chapters join to stage this degree for a large class of candidates. Ritualists from throughout the state attend to confer the degree.

This event was started a number of years ago and now is attended by Masons from throughout Oregon and northern California.

The Jacksonville chapter, established in 1859, is one of the oldest in the state.

The first time this outdoor degree was held was in Ashland in Lithia park but rain forced it to be held in the Masonic temple in Ashland.

Simeon H. Sawyer, Lakeview, grand high priest of Royal Arch Masons of Oregon, and his grand officers will be present. There will also be grand officers of other York Rite Masonic bodies present.

Wives will be entertained at the Ross Gilkison home, 1411 Crown avenue, Medford, by the Royal Arch Widows.
