

Palmer, Nicklaus Play Together

By LEO H. PETERSEN

UPI Sports Editor

Newtown Square, Pa. — (UPI) — Arnold Palmer went after his "three-quarter" slam today and the betting was 2-1 that he will accomplish it by winning the PGA golf championship.

Palmer, the overwhelming favorite, was scheduled to play with U.S. Open champion Jack Nicklaus and Dave Marr. It was the luck of a "blind draw" which put Palmer and the second choice, the 3-1 Nicklaus, in the same threesome.

They also had played together in the first two rounds of the U.S. Open last month and then in the Western Open.

There was some eyebrow raising when it was learned that Palmer and Nicklaus had been drawn to play together again.

"It makes no difference to me," said Palmer, who has won the Masters and the British Open championships, and just missing winning the U.S. Open which he lost in a play-off with Nicklaus. "I enjoy playing with the big dude."

Nicklaus Happy
Nicklaus was happy about the pairings too.

"I think Arnie is the greatest and when you play with him head to head — well you know just where you stand. You are playing with 'the guy you know you have to beat.'"

Bob Rosburg, one of the former 13 PGA champions in the field, shuffled the entry cards from which Palmer and Nicklaus were drawn.

"Believe me, I shuffled them well," said Rosburg. "no one could have been more surprised when the draw came and Palmer and Nicklaus were in the same threesome."

Be that as it may, — and it is certain to be a crowd pleaser in the opening round of this four day tournament — there were 168 other golfers in the field in addition to Palmer, Nicklaus and Marr. Defending champion Jerry Barber, who said he had "two chances" in this big one, and little South African Gary Player, were quoted at 5-1 followed by Billy Casper at 6-1. Dow Finsterwald at 8-1, former U.S. Open champion Gene Littler at 10-1 and dark horse Phil Rodgers at 15-1.

Says Chances Slim
Barber described his two chances as "very slim and none at all."

"I just can't hit with the big boys," he explained. "And I can't putt with them either. That Casper — he's the best putter in the business. And Palmer is right up there, too. That's why he's winning so much."

But Barber didn't putt badly last year when he won the PGA title. He sank putts of 20, 40 and 60 feet on the last three greens to tie Don January and then went on to beat him in the playoff.

Barber plays with January — another freak in the "blind draw" — and Jackie Burke, a former PGA king.

Yakima Downs Salem 7-1 In NL Baseball

United Press International
Yakima picked up five runs in the seventh inning to guarantee a 7-1 victory Wednesday over league-leading Salem.

The Bears had scored runs in the first and sixth, both on triples by Rico Carty and Walt Hrinak. In the seventh, Hrinak came back to drive in two runs with a single while Carty scored one on a fielder's choice. Third baseman Radio Gomez singled to drive in the Bears' final tallies.

In other games, Tri-City blanked Eugene 5-0 and Wenatchee beat Lewiston 4-1.

Tri-City's Lee Featherstone picked up his 10th win against seven defeats by fanning nine Emeralds, allowing two walks and scattering six hits.

Eugene's only threat was in the third when they got a man on second and third with two on.

Lewiston's only run came on a solo homer by Don Marrs. Wenatchee's Bill Ballou was credited with the win, his sixth victory against five defeats.

UPSET VICTORY — Miss Carol Caldwell of Santa Monica, Calif., returns shot to Darlene Hard during the second round of play in the National Clay Courts championship in River Forest, Ill., Wednesday. Miss Caldwell scored an upset victory over Miss Hard, the national champion, 7-5, 6-4. (UPI)

Youth Beats Champ

Chicago — (UPI) — Davis Cup ace Chuck McKinley and Wimbledon women's singles champion Karen Hantze Susman today led survivors into third round action of the up-set-riddled National Clay courts tennis championship.

McKinley and Mrs. Susman were both top-seeded in the tourney at the River Forest Tennis club where few of the high-seeded players were still alive after two rounds.

McKinley ousted Canada's Francis Gubout 6-2, 6-2 in the men's singles, and Mrs. Susman overcame the pain of an injured hand in defeating Carol Rodgers, Shreveport, La., 6-2, 6-1.

Mrs. Susman suffered a dislocated thumb when she put out her hand in trying to break a fall during the early part of her match. She resumed play after a three-hour delay for X-rays and treatment but she did not play in a scheduled doubles match.

An upset pattern which eliminated top-ranked Whitney Reed and third-seeded Billie Jean Moffitt in first round play continued Wednesday when a brash California teen-ager defeated national women's singles queen Darlene Hard.

Carole Caldwell, 19, who is ninth-ranked among American women, outclassed Miss Hard 7-5, 6-4.

Newtown Square, Pa. — (UPI) — His best trick shot, Paul Hahn admits, thrilled the spectators but he had to give it up because "it scared the hell out of me."

He pulled it off more than 2,000 times without a miss in exhibitions around the world. A volunteer would lie flat with the ball sitting up on a tee held between the teeth.

Then Hahn would swing with deadly concentration, sending a half pound of club-head against the ball at a speed of 110 miles per hour.

The handsome, black-haired Hahn's beautiful wife was his steadiest assistant. But he did the trick on many courageous volunteers who know of his fantastic prowess in the trick shot department.

One such, on television, was Garry Moore. Hahn's insurance company caught the show that night and cancelled his protective policy. Moore's wife saw it, too. "You don't," Mrs. Moore said in a quick and frantic call to the studio, "have to do that to make a living. We can sell apples."

People Bugged Him
Then it got to the point where people, as Hahn says, were "bugging" him about the disastrous possibilities should he miss. Even Ben Hogan told him it was too dangerous.

Hahn believed it, too, when in an exhibition at Augusta somebody spoke as he was starting the down swing and momentarily broke his concentration.

"I knew I was out of the groove," he said grimly. "And when I helped my wife up, she said 'My lip is numb.'"

It cost him his confidence and he started to "top" the ball which, at least, was much better than taking a dental drill. But finally he gave it up.

Hahn's show is exceptional without it, as he proved in one of the features preceding the PGA golf championship at Aronimink Golf Club. Good enough to put him, it is estimated in the $150,000 a year income bracket. He also flies his own plane and has made four trips around the world with his one-man show.

Which isn't bad for a man who, before putting together his profitable specialty, tried the pro tour for two years, "and didn't make enough money to mark my ball."

The difference between Hahn and the touring pro is that the personable Paul keeps up a running dialogue with his shots while the average pro freezes if a bee belches. People ask him how he can hit the ball while talking and his answer is that he can't hit it if he doesn't.

They also ask continually why he gave up his most famous trick of hitting the ball off a volunteer's face.

"I've got a four-word answer," he admits with a grin which lacks conviction. "I lost my guts."

And, this being the 13th year in which he has been on the trick shot circuit, he isn't likely to try it again now.
