

Bottles vs. Cans For Soft Drink Business Debated

New York - (UPI) - The struggle to determine what kind of sound shall be made by the soft drink containers bouncing around in a market basket is reaching its annual thirsty season peak about now.

Shall it be a metallic or a glassy clink when the container gets on the kitchen table or refrigerator shelf at home?

Steel companies, promoting extensively, say the metallic sounds are heard in an increasing number of homes and industrial locations by the soft drink imbiber. The soft drink field is a thirsty one: Estimates on which both metal and glass men agree put consumption in 1961 at more than 35 billion units.

Holding Own
Glass advocates, as characterized by the Glass Container Mfrs. Institute, Inc., say that they are holding their own and that if expected developments occur in the soft drink container field, their production figures still will rise.

Richard L. Cheney, executive director and marketing manager of the GCMCI said that his research indicates that the consumer preference for bottle-versus-can in the soft drink field is nine-to-one for bottles, either returnable or non-returnable.

"The bottling industry," he said, "was built on returnables. The returnable bottle is an economical container; figures show that domestic shipments in 1961 of bottles for soft drinks were 1,337,760,000 units, and non-returnables 401,904,000 units."

Ruined Home of St. Peter Found

By ERNEST SAKLER
United Press International
Rome - (UPI) - Archaeologists have discovered what they believe to be the ruins of the house where St. Peter lived as guest of a Roman senator.

The discovery came during repair and restoration work under the floor of the little Church of Santa Pudenziana, one of Rome's finest and most ancient Christian churches.

Tradition says the church was built on the site of the palace of Senator Pudens, who reputedly was host to St. Peter during the Apostle's stay in Rome. The church is named after the senator's daughter, St. Pudenziana, and another ancient church in the same area is dedicated to her sister, St. Praxedes.

Experts of the Rome Superintendence of Monuments said there were indications that ruins found under the floor of the church belonged to the palace of Pudens.

The ruins were those of a luxurious mansion of the first century A.D. - the time of St. Peter's stay in Rome - facing on the ancient Vicus Patricius (Patrician lane) in the exclusive residential area of the Esquiline hill.

The discoveries included parts of walls built with the typical Roman technique called "opus reticulatum" - little square pieces of brick cemented together to look like a network - and a rare type of mosaic floor inset with multicolored pieces of marble.

According to tradition, wealthy Senator Pudens was converted by St. Peter and his house was the meeting place of the first Christians in Rome.

The church of Santa Pudenziana is first mentioned by that name in a manuscript of 384 A.D., the year when it was first restored.

The church underwent several restorations through the centuries, but has remained almost unchanged since 1598.

The fourth century mosaic in the apse, made of glass cubes, is among the most beautiful in Rome and shows the transition from the classical to the Byzantine style. It shows Christ on a throne before a small mountain topped by a cross adorned with the symbols of the four evangelists. At the right of the throne is St. Paul, crowned by St. Pudenziana, and at the left St. Peter, crowned by St. Praxedes.

The church underwent several restorations through the centuries, but has remained almost unchanged since 1598.
