The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine Mayo Clinic
(Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1962)

Child Who Gets Convulsion When Feverish

I can remember being so interested when I was a child – the son of a physician –every so often hearing my mother saying over the telephone, "The doctor is out making calls, but I think I can soon reach him, and then I'll get him to hurry to your place; in the meantime, don't get too frightened; just put the child in a warm bath, and the convulsion will soon let up."

Alvarez

As every mother can imagine, seeing a child go into a convulsion is a sufficiently terrifying experience; but then the awful question arises, "Is this likely to happen again and again?" And the more serious questions come crowding in: "Will the doctor, when he arrives, dare tell me the truth as he sees it?" "Will he know what the truth is?" or "By consulting a number of articles and books in the library will he be able to learn what the truth is, or will the writers of the books tell polite and cheering lies?" Finally, "If the doctor should tell me that the convulsions will probably keep coming, will I do as many mothers do and turn angrily on the man?"

When I was a boy, my father used to say to me sadly, "I would so like to try to help these children with seizures, but if I sometimes admit the disease is epilepsy I immediately am discharged and, worse yet, I earn the lasting hatred of the family." Sometimes then they go to a quack and love him because he tells them the pleasant untruths they so want to hear.

The same thing happens today and, as a result, even our books on convulsive troubles are, in places, unreliable, as when it comes to discussing such ticklish and unmentionable matters as the heredity of a child who has had a few convulsions. I just read an article by a learned professor on the possible significance of the first convulsion in the case of a child, and he never once dared mention the most important question of all, and the one that would throw the most light on the problem – "What is the child's hereditary background? Is it good or bad?"

Hates to Hurt

By nature I am a kindly person who much hates to hurt anyone, and particularly a distraught mother, but when in my daily mail I get many letters salying, "Twice now when Junior had a fever he went into a convulsion. Naturally, we are frantic with anxiety, but our doctor won't say much. For God's sake, put us out of our misery, and tell us what are the chances for the boy's future? Will he some day be safe in marrying and having children?"

If I am to give this mother an opinion of any value, the first thing I must learn is, what is the family history? Has Junior any ancestors, on either side of the family, who ever had convulsions or "blackouts," or unexplained accidents, or who drank heavily or were decidedly eccentric, or difficult, or violent tempered, or hard to get along with, or definitely disturbed mentally? If he hasn't any such ancestry I will be hopeful. Perhaps then all that is wrong with the lad is that he is very high-strung. However, I will insist on having electroencephalograms made because they so often tell us what we want to know.

If the boy has more spells so that he has to try the effect of, let us say, Dilantin, the dosage must be adjusted until perhaps it controls the seizures without making the child dull. If Dilantin does not work perfectly, the family doctor can add a small dose of another sedative such as Mebaral. This may make the child more stable and better behaved at school.

Always the mother must keep watching for "undesirable or dangerous side-reactions" – such as a skin-rash, and must stop giving the drug the minute such an unpleasant reaction appears.

Can Cut Dosage

After four years with no convulsions, the parents can start cutting down slowly on the dose of the drug to see if the child can do without it. The hopeful thing about the disease is that commonly children and young people tend to "grow out of" the spells. The only sad feature is that the person may still have personality difficulties – at home and at school.

Some of these people are still so quick-tempered that they tell me they have trouble getting a spouse, or keeping one after marriage. Some who have gone ahead to have children write to tell me that they greatly wish their doctor had warned them not to. One of their children falls down, and every time this happens the mother's heart is filled with anguish and feelings of guilt. Poor woman; my heart goes out to her; she feels now that she should not have run the risk.

One thing I now hope is that all mothers with a child who has had seizures will not write me a bitter letter accusing me of having said that all children who have an occasional blackout became delinquent or violent or unpleasant. That is not true. I have known many people with seizures who were sweet lovely people.

Do you have a family member or friend who suffers from seizures? If so, you'll want to read Dr. Alvarez' newest booklet which thoroughly explains epilepsy. To obtain it, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "What Is Epilepsy?" to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. MMT, The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Box 957, Des Moines 4, Iowa.

Choral Institute Concert Tonight

Ashland – The first annual Southern Oregon Choral Institute will appear in concert at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Churchill Hall auditorium at Southern Oregon college, Ashland.

Under the direction of Jester Hairston, guest conductor, the choral group will present a collection of Negro spirituals.

Hairston, a nationally-known choral director and composer, is a graduate of Tufts university and of the Juilliard School of Music. His background of folk and spiritual music representative of the American people, prompted the Department of State to send him to Europe recently on a goodwill tour. He conducted choirs in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Norway.

Some 35 Southern Oregon music educators, choral directors and voice students make up the choir which will sing tonight. The concert will be open to the public at no charge, according to the Southern Oregon college music department. No reservations for seats will be taken, although the popularity of Hairston's presentations indicate that the auditorium could be packed as was his midweek assembly at the college.

4-H NEWS

Willing Workers

The June meeting of the Willing Workers 4-H club was held at the home of our leader, Mrs. J. Anhorn. The roll was called and Gail Glass led flag salutes. We talked about a pre-fair in Central Point and the county fair. The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served by Gail Glass. We had a game by Cathy Anhorn.

Political Circumlocutions

New Jersey Democrat Speaks Parable Of Young Lion as King of Jungle

By DICK WEST

Washington–(UPI)–Any similarity between a congressional press release and an Aesop fable usually is only coincidental.

West

Many of the statements made by congressmen may sound like fables, but this is because they are swaddled in political circumlocutions.

Seldom do you find a member of Congress who deliberately and openly engages in allegorical composition.

One such rarity has just turned up in the person of Rep. Frank Thompson, a New Jersey Democrat and nonconformist.

Wishing to apprise his constituents of his views on the bust-up between President Kennedy and certain business leaders, Thompson did not content himself with the ordinary type of declaration.

Instead, he reared back and spake a parible, the text of which was duly transcribed and forwarded to news media in the capital.

I am not qualified to say whether Thompson's fling as a fablist illuminates the issues in the tradition of Aesop, but I certainly can vouch for its novelty.

Following is a condensed version of his offering:

"There came a time in the jungle when the friendly old lion that had reigned in harmony with all the animals retired to a comfortable old farm. A bitter fight took place over who would suceed him, but a slim majority of the animals finallly chose a young lion with a very bushy mane.

"Now, because of their size, some of the larger beasts tried to convince the lion that what was good for them was good for the jungle. This made the lion angry.

"My father told me that many big animals were sorry old beasts," he roared.

"Then a strange thing happened. Through that mysterious process of communications in the jungle, the word was passed that the lion was unfriendly to big beastness.

"The Jungle Chamber of Elephants said, 'We have lost confidence in the lion.' The National Association of Rhinoceroses said, 'The lion has created a bad climate for us.'

"The pitiful cries of 'unfriendly' and 'no confidence' affected the lion deeply. He said, 'There must be something we can do to show them how much we love them and to make them feel confident in us.'

"So the lion set about soothing the larger animals. He invited some of them to lunch, and said he would try to have taxes cut.

" 'Now you are getting the idea,' said some of the bigger beasts. 'It's okay if you stimulate us, but just don't interfere with the way we operate. Remember what's good for big beastness is good for . . .'

" 'I know, I know,' said the lion. 'I've heard that one before'."

Three Accidents Are Checked by Police

Medford police checked three non-injury vehicle accidents in less than one hour Wednesday. Two drivers were cited, police said.

Vehicles operated by Rena Ellen Curtis, 26, of 430 Benson st., and Fred Spaur, Central Point, collided about 4:45 p.m. on Cedar st. near its intersection with Iowa st.

Shirley Louise Berry, 29, Palmer, Alaska, was cited for failure to yield the right of way after the car she was driving collided with a vehicle operated by Keith Arnold Smith, 20, of 1554 South Columbus ave., about 5 p.m. at Haven and Grape sts.

Carl Edward Borg, 72, of 324 South Peach st., was cited by police for violation of basic rule after the car he was driving struck a parked car registered to Carlos Willis Morris, 128 Mistletoe st., about 5:30 p.m. at Mistletoe and 10th sts.

HOW LONG HAS IT BEEN?

...since you turned on "running water" by tipping a pitcher?

. . . Chances are the pitcher-and-basin era is long gone from your home, but are you still using a refrigerator of the pitcher-and-basin age?

Now then...

Wouldn't you rather have a modern REFRIGERATOR-FREEZER in your kitchen? Isn't a modern refrigeration unit almost as essential as modern plumbing?

The modern refrigerator-freezer is a supermarket in your kitchen . . . Roomy, efficient, with a multitude of freezing and preserving compartments, it pays off not only in convenience, but in dollars saved as well. Buy "food specials" . . . meats, fruits, vegetables . . . in season, when they're cheap . . . Freeze and preserve them for the "off" season — and make back the cost of your new refrigerator-freezer by doing so! You can't do this with an outdated refrigerator.

So — live modern, live well, with a supermarket in your kitchen. Visit your favorite Cal/Ore Electrical League Dealer today. Talk to him about trade-ins, low down payments, easy terms — on a truly modern, electric
