World's Fair Pictures To Be Shown Monday Afternoon

The Seattle World's fair will be shown in colored slides to the Arm Chair Travelers group at the Senior Activity center Monday, July 23, by Jesse Anderson, 195 Morton street, Ashland. The program will begin at 1 p.m.

Mr. Anderson, who has traveled on several continents since his retirement, has shown in the past the pictures of an auto and hunting trip he took to Africa two years ago.

The visit to the fair was made on a trip along the Oregon coast and a boat trip to Victoria, B.C., and the pictures include many scenes taken on the water front and in lower Seattle.

On the return trip to Ashland, Mr. Anderson attended the national track meet of the NCAA at the University of Oregon where he photographed the university winning against 60 other colleges.

Monday from 10 to 12 a.m. the Senior Craftsman receiving committee will be in the center to take in handmade gift articles to be placed in the newly opened branch of the Senior Craftsman of Oregon at 31 Water street in the Ashland Art Gallery. Craftsmen are offered this opportunity to join in this non-profit co-operative.

Art Group Film Series Continues

The Rogue Valley Art association will continue its summer film series Tuesday, July 24, with a presentation of Stanley Kramer's "The Member of the Wedding."

The film will be shown in the auditorium of the Jackson County Red Cross. The showing will begin at 8 p.m. and is free to the public.

"The Member of the Wedding" was produced for film in 1952, after a long and successful run as a play on Broadway. Principals Ethel Waters, Julie Harris and Brandon De Wilde played in both the stage and screen versions.

This film should be especially meaningful to teenagers and parents, but as a piece of film art it is directed to an ever broader audience and rightfully takes its place with the classics of American theater.

Register Members

The committee will be present to give information and register new members in the mornings this week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 23 through July 25.

The arts jury will meet later in the week to consider the entries, which, if accepted, will be consigned at once to the gallery, which is operated by Robert Onstad.

Since the Shakespearean Festival opened Saturday, July 21, tourists have started to patronize this art area one block north of the plaza and the entrance to the theater.

Fifty-three paintings, work of the two oil painting classes at the center, were shown at the Greenwich Village art exhibit in the Library park Saturday, July 14. The students were asked to show as guests of the Southern Oregon Society of Artists, which has sponsored the classes since they were first organized in 1958. All the teachers who have volunteered to lead the classes in oil, water color, pastel, and charcoal have been members of the SOSA, and have given considerable time to develop senior artists.

In September, both the center art classes have been asked to exhibit paintings at the Phoenix Garden club flower show and the Senior center orchestra has been asked to play during the afternoon.

New members who have asked to join the copper tooling class, which meets on Wednesday at 1 p.m., have been asked to attend on July 25 as the teacher, Mrs. Ethel Byers, will be available at that time.

Concerts Suggested

Outdoor concerts in the city parks have been suggested for a community program in which the Senior center orchestra could participate. With a song leader assisting, community sings with the emphasis on old-time well known songs could also be developed. Those who are interested in such a program and are willing to help with its operation may contact Mrs. Fred Rankin, center chairman.

The orchestra practices each Thursday morning during the summer. Spanish classes will not open until September. Use of the library has increased at the center and the cataloging of the books is almost completed by Miss Kathryn Hornbrook, library volunteer from the Rogue Valley manor. The center is now open four mornings and three afternoons each week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings, and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.
