Not-Too-Easy Card Trick By Betty Kahn

You don't need cards for this trick. Just think them. But remember their values—jack equals 11; queen, 12; king, 13; ace, 1. Remember, too, clubs equal six; diamonds, seven; hearts, eight; spades, nine. Tell a friend you can guess what card he's thinking of.

First, he thinks of a card. Then he must add to it the number of the next higher card. He multiplies the total by five, then adds the value of his suit (clubs, six, etc.).

Ask what number he has attained. Then you mentally subtract five and tell him the card he thought of.

For instance, let's say he thinks of the two of clubs. He adds three, next higher. Two and three equal five. He multiplies by five. Five times five are 25. Add the suit value—25 plus 6 equals 31. He tells you 31, and you mentally subtract five, which is 26. The first figure is the card he was thinking of, and the second figure is his suit.

Who's Got the Penny? By Bill Barton

As the game starts, the leader holds the penny. Each player holds out his hands, palm to palm. The leader pretends to drop his penny into each pair of hands. The one who gets the coin is chased by the others as soon as they suspect he has it. When he returns it to the leader, and only then, he is safe. If he does, he becomes the next leader. By the way, if the players don't know whom to suspect, the leader tells them who has the coin. The chase then begins!
