

Russia Gets Into Act With Gromyko's Telstar Appearance

New York (AP)—And now the Russians are ready to get into the act.

Pictures of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will be beamed from Geneva across the Atlantic today to give U.S. television viewers a first-hand glimpse of the Russian statesman at the conference table.

Gromyko's face, not exactly an unfamiliar one to Americans, might not generate as much excitement here as Monday's dazzling display of famed European landmarks, but his appearance on U.S. screens via the space magic of Telstar will mark still another "first" in the infant era of global television.

The Russians previously had indicated an unwillingness to participate in the Telstar experiment and just last week the Soviet newspaper Ivestia criticized the launching of the tiny satellite (built by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.) as an attempt to establish a "capitalistic monopoly" in space.

To Go Down in History

But the Soviet delegation in Geneva Monday agreed to let the National Broadcasting Company transmit the foreign minister's picture across the sea and thus Gromyko will go down in history as the first Russian to appear on transatlantic television.

Gromyko was scheduled to be filmed along with U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk and British Foreign Secretary Lord Home at the opening of today's session of the 17-nation disarmament conference.

Their pictures were then to be flown to Paris for relay to the French experimental station in Brittany and on to New York via the satellite. No exact time was given for the relay to American screens but it was expected to take place late in the afternoon.

Preparations for the Geneva show were being made while scientists and television officials on both sides of the ocean were exulting over the triumph of Monday's unprecedented television space extravaganza.

The first portion of the show gave millions of Europeans in 18 different countries a stunning, panoramic view of Americans.

During the 18-minute telecast, European viewers were swept across the North American continent from the United States in New York to President Kennedy's news conference in Washington, to the Canadian border at Niagara Falls, to a baseball game in Chicago, to the Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Ont., to Mount Rushmore in South Dakota and on across the western plains to the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

Then three hours later, when the 170-pound satellite made its next orbit, it was Europe's turn to display its wares and American and Canadian viewers were taken on a breathtaking tour of the Old World's historical treasures and cultural landmarks.

Closeup of Big Ben

The opening shot from Europe was a closeup of Big Ben, London's storied clock, and from there Americans were guided—with all the magic carpet speed of modern electronics—to the Arctic Circle where Lapland farmers herded reindeer and Lapp girl Maj-lo Skaltie proudly showed off her white reindeer calf.

From that isolated spot in the rustic North, the cameras moved down the continent into the great cities of Western civilization.

American viewers taken down the Champs Elysee to the Arc de Triomphe in Paris; to the houses of parliament and Westminster Bridge across the Thames in London; to Yugoslavia for a glimpse of the national museum where the Gospel of Miroslav, a 12th century Serbian document, is preserved; to the Michelangelo paintings inside the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican; then back to London and the British Museum for a picture of the Magna Carta, and once again to Paris and the Louvre for a look at the Winged Victory of Samothrace and other art treasures.

Forestry Affairs Official Endorsed

Washington (AP)—Pacific Northwest senators have endorsed the creation of an assistant secretary for forestry affairs in the Agriculture Department.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), in a letter to Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman, said Monday the new position had the support of eight senators, including himself.

"Our joint efforts in connection with resolving the Northwest lumber problem have convinced us that firmer policy control must be asserted over sales of public timber," Magnuson said in the letter.

The letter said the assistant secretary would help coordinate the activities of the Forest Service with "overall policies and goals" of the administration.

"This has been noticeably absent," Magnuson said.

The Washington Democrat said those joining him in support of the new position included Sens. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), Maurice B. Neuberger (D-Ore.), Frank Church (D-Idaho), Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), and E. L. Bartlett (D-Alaska).
