Charlie Morrison, Grants Pass auctioneer, was moving down a row of merchandise at his weekly sale Monday night when he came upon a washing machine and let the following slip out: "Well now, here we have a washing machine—in perfect condition—all it needs is a new motor!"

A split second later Morrison realized what he'd said, and quipped, "If you say it fast it doesn't sound too bad." We can't help but hold the highest admiration for auctioneers. To be successful they've got to be a combination of shrewd businessman and circus clown.

Freeway Helping Rogue River Boom, Says City's Mayor

Rogue River - This community is booming, both in business and population, and it's virtually all due to the new Interstate 5 freeway, says Rogue River Mayor Larry Sheehan.

"I think our area will double in population and home-sites during the next three years," the mayor predicted recently. Present population of the city is 540.

A number of homes are located just outside the city limits, however, so that the population of the area is somewhat higher than 540, Sheehan explained.

Rogue River lies adjacent to the Interstate 5 freeway and access to and from the city is provided for motorists traveling both east and west.

This situation will help stimulate Rogue River's growth, Sheehan feels, in that it will make the city into sort of a bedroom community for people who work in Medford, and to a lesser extent Grants Pass.

Other Rogue River businessmen also report an increase in business, particularly as a result of the opening of Valley of the Rogue state park nearby.

ENTERING HOSPITAL Wilderville-Mrs. L. E. Wallman of Cheney Creek rd. will enter Josephine General hospital for major surgery this week.

FROM JAPAN—Mrs. Galin Jordan of Jacksonville displays part of her button collection. These are modern Satsuma buttons she brought back from Japan.

Retired Chaplain's Wife Has Unusual Collection Of Numerous Buttons

By MARY ALICE BRUSHA Mrs. Galin Jordan, wife of a retired Air Force chaplain now living at 400 D st., Jacksonville, has a hobby that creates widespread interest.

She collects buttons of all kinds to decorate their home. Although she inherited her mother's button string some 20 years ago, she says she never dreamed at that time she would become involved to the point that each button seems a little treasure to her.

She has picture buttons which tell a story of historical or mythical significance, paper-weight buttons, callous, jet or black glass, weskit, jewel, Victorian, inlays, military, those made of vegetable ivory and others too numerous to mention here.

"The Button Parade" by Foster, "Maine Charm Charm String" by Graham and the "Nichols Hand Book" have been a big help to her enabling her to identify buttons and to place them in their proper category.

It has been hard to concentrate on a few choice ones, as her collection contains some of all the above mentioned buttons, she explained.

Mrs. Jordan has been a member of the Eugene Button club since 1948 and likewise of the state and national button societies.

The bulletins issued by these clubs have helped her to arrange and display her cards for the annual exhibits. She has some prize winning cards of buttons much desired by other collectors.

At present she is preparing a card of pearls and vegetable ivory for the annual button show in Corvallis to be held in September.

While the Jordans were in Shiroi, Japan she became interested in the Satsuma button and had some made with her own suggested design. She then had them mounted on cards.

Mrs. Jordan says she would be pleased to show her collection to any collectors by appointment, especially to boys and girls who may be interested in forming a Junior button club. Such clubs are affiliated with the Oregon State and National Button society.
