

Jacksonville Brochure Planned By Siskiyou Sites Foundation

A Jacksonville brochure, which would depict and illustrate the various historic attractions of the area, was discussed at a recent board meeting of the Siskiyou Pioneer Sites Foundation.

Jack Sutton, Foundation president, said that an 8 1/2 by 11-inch brochure of three folds with suitable illustrations would cost $280 for 20,000. Because of the expense and importance of the pamphlet, the board decided that other groups should be consulted about co-publishing it.

Named to a committee to study the situation were Sutton, chairman, Bob Lowe, Leone Salyer and Doris Brewer. The committee members will invite other organizations in the Jacksonville area that have interest in such a brochure to participate.

Furnishings Discussed

The board also discussed furnishings from the historic Hornbrook hotel, pictures for Banking magazine, pioneer murals from the Jackson house, the Beckman bank and U.S. Hotel and membership fees.

Mrs. Edward C. Smith of Hornbrook, Calif., informed the organization that furnishings in the Hornbrook hotel were available for purchase. Offered were antique bedroom sets, a staircase, an ornate trimmed bay window, and old chairs. It was decided that in view of the shortage of available funds the foundation could not purchase the items at this time.

Art Chipman notified board members that Banking Magazine wants pictures and background information of the Beckman bank. The magazine is nationally circulated to banking interests. The board approved providing the information and pictures.

Murals Available

Mrs. Janice Houghton said representatives of the Jackson House, Medford, had advised her that the pioneer murals painted by Hal Bishop might be available to the foundation for use in local buildings.

The board decided that the foundation did not have funds to purchase the paintings, but would like to receive them. Arrangements could be made for storing them locally in Jacksonville and later possibly displaying them in restored buildings, such as the U.S. Hotel dining room, according to spokesmen.

Mrs. Doris Brewer presented an optimistic attendance report on the Beckman bank. She reported that the attendance has been increasing in the past several weeks.

A progress report was given by George Brewer on the U.S. Hotel. He said the balcony is up and a wood preserving compound has been placed on the wood surface of the balcony materials.

Three categories of memberships were recommended by Wilson Slater—regular, $2; sustaining memberships, $25; and life, $50. A letter of invitation to membership, along with a copy of the annual report and the dues structure, is to be mailed to many valley residents soon. New organization envelopes are being prepared with a picture of the U.S. Hotel on them.

"Vincent Van Gogh: A Self Portrait," one of the best television shows of 1961, will be rebroadcast Monday at 9 p.m. on KMED-TV giving those viewers who missed it in November another chance to see this story of Vincent Van Gogh's torment and genius.

The program is called a self-portrait because most of the visual and narrative content was supplied by Van Gogh himself—through paintings and drawings made available by museums and private collectors and through excerpts (read by Lee J. Cobb) from the remarkable series of letters the artist wrote to his younger brother Theo. These letters were written during Van Gogh's most productive years as well as when he was confined in an asylum for the mentally ill.

Besides winning an Emmy Award and a George Foster Peabody Award, the program has received a citation from the National Association for Better Radio and Television as the best single program of the year, and was selected to represent the United States in the Venice International Film Exhibition and the Prix Italia competition in Verona.
