

Brown-Nixon Election Expected To Be Close in California

Public Opinion Polls Indicate Narrow Victory

Sacramento, Calif. — (UPI) — Richard M. Nixon and Edmund G. Brown appear to be heading for a photo finish in their race for governor of California.

Recent public opinion polls and predictions by some of the state's top political writers point to an exceedingly close election on Nov. 6.

The latest sampling of voter opinion (the California Poll) gives the 57-year-old Democratic governor a 47 per cent to 44 per cent edge. Last April, a similar sampling showed Brown on top 45-42.

But both men face problems as they prepare to launch their final campaign assault on Labor Day.

Jack S. McDowell, political editor of the San Francisco News-Call Bulletin, summed it up this way:

"This is a real horse race. Nixon has and always has had an uphill fight because of the preponderance of registered Democrats. He still has the job of getting the conservative Republicans behind him and at the same time wooing the Democratic vote.

"But on the other side of the coin," McDowell added, "the June primary results show almost 19 per cent of the Democrats voted against Brown. To me, this is a point worth considering."

James Bassett, political analyst for the Los Angeles Times, rates the Brown-Nixon contest a tossup.

"The polls haven't altered our view that the autumn runoff will be breathlessly close," Bassett said.

GOP Primary Turnout

He noted that one poll showed about one out of every three voters felt Brown had done a "poor job" as governor.

Herbert L. Phillips, political editor of the McClatchy newspapers, (Sacramento, Fresno, Modesto), joined in the prediction of a close race. But he said he felt the Democratic edge in registration (56.6 per cent to 40.1 per cent) gave Brown an advantage.

"The primary results showed a substantially larger Republican turnout," Phillips said. "Yet, the total Democratic vote in all of the seven statewide contests was more than the Republican vote in every case."

A recent United Press International poll of all members of the state legislature split strictly along party lines on the question of who would be the November winner.

Party Line Predictions

But when asked to predict the margin of victory in a state with more than 7 million voters, most of the legislators who picked Brown said he would win by 200,000 to 500,000 votes. Those favoring Nixon estimated his margin of victory would be from only 50,000 votes to a high of 250,000.

On Labor Day, both will launch a seven-day, a-week campaign schedule which by November will have seen the two men cover all of the 38 counties in the search for votes.

They are scheduled for only two face-to-face meetings in the fall. One will be a televised debate some time in mid-October. They also will appear on the same platform before the UPI National Editors & Publishers Conference in San Francisco on Oct. 1.

Klamath Falls Girl Named Miss Indian

Sheridan, Wyo.—(UPI)—An 18-year-old Oregon girl whose Indian name means Prairie Flower reigned today as the 9th Miss Indian America.

Ramona Soto, whose Indian name is Olsonbumwas, was crowned here Sunday night after winning the annual competition on knowledge of Indian lore and of the American Indian and her ability to present the Indian's story to the white man.

Ramona, of the Klamath Tribe at Klamath Falls, Ore., received her title at the conclusion of the three-day All-American Indian Days.

Miss Soto, a graduate of Klamath Union High School, plans to attend Colorado Women's College at Denver this year. She hopes to study law at the University of Oregon "to prepare for a career of service to my people in meeting the problems they face as one of the tribes whose relations with the federal government have been terminated."

The Klamath tribe has become self-sustaining, and no longer a ward of the government.

Plea Expected in Lake Oswego Case

Oregon City — (UPI) — Hugh D. Hanna, 20, Lake Oswego, was expected to enter a plea in Circuit Court here today to a charge of severely beating four children earlier this year.

He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. He was accused of attacking the children, who ranged in age from 12 to 2 1/2 years, with an iron bar at Lake Oswego on May 2.

Circuit Judge Howard Blanding Friday said the youth was capable of assisting in his own defense after he heard a psychiatric report by the Oregon State hospital at Salem.

Hanna, a student at Clark Junior college at Vancouver, Wash., was arrested at Little Rock, Ark., following a widespread search for the children's assailant.

The children have recovered.

Guardsmen Train At Camp Rilea On Active Duty

Camp Rilea, Warrenton — Men from Medford and Ashland were among the some 1,300 Oregon Army National Guardsmen who moved to field positions on the sand dunes of this coastal military post Sunday, and began four days of tactical maneuvers.

The 249th Air Defense artillery and supporting units started annual two weeks' summer active duty training here Saturday.

They will be in tactical bivouac positions along the sand dunes until Thursday. Tuesday night the units will conduct a night exercise involving use of simulated guerrilla action.

Rainfall greeted the Guardsmen as they arrived here Saturday. Units are from across the state — the 249th has batteries in Portland, Burns, Gresham, Redmond, Bend, Ashland, Medford, Klamath Falls, Salem, Coos Bay, Newport, Albany, and Lake Oswego. Supporting units are from Portland, Salem and Clackamas.

Field training today and Tuesday is to include 30 and 50 caliber machine gun and 3.5 mm. rocket launcher firing. Air defense firing of the track-mounted twin 40 mm. guns will concentrate during the final week of camp.

Commanding the encampment here this summer is Col. Donald N. Anderson, Salem, while Col. Laurence M. Blaisdell, Salem, commands the 249th.

Guardsmen will conclude their training here Aug. 18, and make way for the 162d Engineer Battalion, which arrives there for its annual summer training period.

Morse Steals Spotlight as Democrats Launch Three-Day Meeting in Seattle

Seattle — (UPI) — Democrats from 13 western states met today to discuss ways and means of electing congressional candidates more favorable to President Kennedy's legislative program.

National Chairman John Bailey told the delegates in a formal speech that "The President needs more votes to get his programs enacted by Congress."

But much of the spotlight was stolen Sunday by a Democratic opponent of Kennedy's communications satellite bill, Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon.

Morse told 170 persons who attended a banquet on the first day of the three-day meeting that he opposed the bill because it was a "give-away to the favored few, the fruits of billions of dollars invested in the space program by the taxpayers."

He said he hoped Congress would adjourn by Sept. 1 — with the satellite bill still unpassed — and return after the election to consider the matter.

He added that if Senate leadership does not take his suggestion for early adjournment, he is prepared to continue his "educational seminar," some call it a filibuster, to prevent passage of the bill.

"The Federal Communications Commission's record in regulating the earthbound operations of AT&T is not very encouraging," Morse said. "Every Republican in the Senate is for this bill. That should make us take second looks at it in view of their past record of giveaways."

The administration will get a chance to answer Morse tonight when Theodore C. Sorensen, special counsel to the President, will address a banquet session.

Bailey told a news conference Sunday that he thought a quick tax cut would help Democratic changes in the November election. But Sorensen, who met newsmen with Bailey, declined to comment on the issue.

Sorensen said Kennedy was still undecided on a tax cut. Both Sorensen and Bailey agreed that congressional defeat of the administration's medical care for the aged bill would be a key issue in the campaign.

Bailey predicted that all Democratic incumbents running for reelection in the West would win. He also predicted that Gov. Edmund G. Brown would be reelected in California over former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.
