

Woodworkers Withdraw Earlier Demands for Wage Hikes

Move Virtually Assures Lumber Industry Peace

Portland—UPI—Members of the International Woodworkers of America have voted to withdraw earlier wage demands, it was announced today by the Timber Operators Council.

The IWA on June 27 notified the TOC it was recommending withdrawal of demands for a 30-cent hourly wage increase at present and would put the matter to a vote of union members. The announcement today said the vote had been completed.

Peace Virtually Assured

Karl F. Glos, executive vice president of the TOC, said this means virtual assurance of peace in the Northwest lumber industry at least until June 1 of next year. That is when present contracts expire. They opened this year for wages only.

Glos said he would attempt to arrange a meeting in a few days with the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union to try to conclude an agreement setting aside wage demands until next June. The LSW has been concentrating on completing contracts in the pine industry which are not represented by the TOC.

Letter Quoted

Glos quoted a letter from Harvey Nelson, chairman of the IWA Western States Regional Council Negotiation committee, saying: "This is to advise this organization (IWA) will not press further for a general wage increase as a result of the contract opening in 1962. You may, therefore, consider negotiations closed for a general wage increase until such time as another notice is served by the local unions in accordance with the opening provisions of the various working agreements."

Both the IWA and LSW represent some 30,000 workers in the Northwest.

Glos said "action by the union members shows that they have realistically appraised the current situation."

The TOC represents 191 employers.

Duisburg, Germany—UPI—West German authorities are trying to halt the flow of Japanese-made "trick food" into the country and have attributed one death to the practical joke items.

Police said a 65-year-old Duisburg man died several weeks ago after eating a sandwich containing "trick Swiss cheese," a soft plastic material resembling the real thing. Officials said imitation sausages and plastic scrambled eggs, mostly imported from Japan, also have been confiscated. They were distributed in West Germany from Hamburg, police said.

Authorities said they have asked Interpol, the international police agency, to help stop the flow of the items into this country.

Argentine Army Commander Leads Rebellion

Buenos Aires—UPI—The government announced today that Gen. Federico Toranzo Montero, commander of the 4th Army Corps has "committed an act of rebellion" and is attempting to take over command of the Argentine army.

Shortly after the government announcement, Toranzo announced that he had set up a "command" at the headquarters of army mountain troops in the northern city of Jujuy.

It was also reported that he had begun broadcasting from there to all army units for support and was demanding the resignation of War Secretary Gen. Juan Bautista Loza.

A communique from the War Secretariat said, however, that the army command "has taken corresponding steps for a rapid normalization of the situation."

It described Toranzo's action as an "isolated event." However, authoritative sources said "doubtful" army commanders were being relieved of their commands in Patagonia and Buenos Aires as a result of his revolt.

Other sources said a "wide-spread" shakeup in top army commands was being quickly carried out as a result of Toranzo's action in an effort to nip the rebellion.

New Manufacturing Methods Save Money In Tobacco Industry

Baltimore, Md.—UPI—The tobacco industry in the United States is in a "technological revolution" that is saving about $100 million annually in the manufacturing costs of cigarettes and cigars, according to W. P. Cadogan, of the American Machine and Foundry company, Springfield, Conn.

Cadogan told a symposium at a recent meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers that the revolution involves mostly the use of "sheet" tobacco. This was described as grinding dried tobacco to 60 to 80 mesh size and bonding it together with an adhesive derived from tobacco stems. These stems formerly were discarded as waste.

Western Demos Adopt Series of Resolutions

Seattle—UPI—Western Democrats are for the administration's foreign trade bill, regulation of the drug industry, outdoor recreation and public power projects and are against lobbying in Congress by private utility companies.

The 13-state Western Democratic Conference adopted a series of resolutions without debate and without amendments Tuesday at the end of a three-day session which had been marked by controversy.

As the meeting was running through its final session here, the Democratic and Republican chairmen were trading charges in Washington over the views of one conference speaker.

GOP National Chairman William Miller branded as "almost traitorous" the remark by W. H. Ferry, a vice president of the Fund for the Republic, that the FBI's efforts to control communism were ineffective "spy swatting."

But Democratic National Chairman John Bailey replied that his party believes "in freedom of speech and is not afraid to be exposed to ideas with which it disagrees."

Conference Chairman C. Girard Davidson, Democratic national committeeman from Oregon, said the conference was a "complete success."

He said it had been intended to be controversial and it was just that.

Davidson said he hoped the meeting helped shape western Democrats into a "solid block of liberal thinking to combat the reactionaries in the south."

Investigation Urged

The conference adopted a resolution urging the Federal Power Commission to "investigate the activities of private monopoly power utilities in lobbying both at Washington, D.C., and at our state capitals."

The resolution said private utility firms "have used their influence and reprobates money to lead the fight against beneficial developments" of public power projects.

The conference backed public electric projects at the Hanford atomic works in Washington State, the Knowles dam in Montana, the Burns Creek project in Idaho, the Rampart dam in Alaska and Bruce's Eddy dam in Idaho.

The Hanford project, the resolution said, would use waste steam from the production of plutonium to make electricity. A measure authorizing the project was defeated recently in the House.

Other resolutions called for: Approval by Congress of the administration trade bill which would give the President authority to reduce domestic tariffs in return for re-

Stocks in Third Successive Drop

New York—UPI—Stocks declined for the third consecutive session today.

Among the blue chips, American Telephone, General Foods, International Nickel and Sears Roebuck all lost at least a point.

Leading steels were mostly down fractions but Youngstown dipped 1 1/2. The big three auto issues were all off around 1/2 point and a majority of the major chemicals and international oils showed small losses.

Polio Victim Uses Precision Switches

Freeport, Ill.—UPI—A handful of tiny switches has helped restore an almost completely paralyzed polio patient to a useful life. Kenneth Kingery of Stoughton, Wis., has been paralyzed from the neck down since 1951. All he can do is turn his head, talk and move three fingers and thumb of his left hand a quarter-inch. To breathe, Kingery wears an artificial respirator during the day and sleeps on a rocking bed at night.

To get maximum usefulness of the limited movement of the fingers, Kingery consulted engineers at Honeywell's Micro switch division here. They devised a handmount fitted with two precision switches. By barely touching the switches Kingery can operate an automatic page-turner, dial a telephone, turn a tape recorder on and off.

Trained as an engineer, Kingery has turned to writing. He recently finished a four-year course in creative writing from the University of Wisconsin (with an A average) and is working on a story for children and an autobiography.
