Deadline for the monthly calendar is 8 a.m. of the day of publication and for week days, news is 5 p.m. the day before publication.

1 p.m. — Get Together club, Girls Community club

From 20 years ago will be watercolors which Mr. Bennett painted in the 1940s, largely of Rogue valley scenes and buildings. Also in the showing will be works which were inspired by places he was stationed during World War II, and those inspired by his residence in Chicago, where he attended the Art Institute of Chicago, where he later taught and where he received much recognition. Others were the result of travels in the Mid-West and Southern portions of the nation.

At one time this artist did a series of paintings of historic buildings in Jacksonville. Some of these are hung in the Parish house of St. Mark's Episcopal church and a few of the series will be in the week end exhibit.

Some of his oils resulted from his travels and living in France and Italy and a number of miniature oils and constructions were completed in the last three years. There are early still life works, figure paintings; one of his most recent series of works was inspired by the electrical power sub-station at Lone Pine. There are portraits, including some of valley residents.

This versatile and imaginative artist also has completed several editions of silk screen prints and lithographs, does oil sketches and drawings.

In recent years he has achieved much recognition for pole sculpture, such as those grouped around the South Grape studio, and the opportunity to see and study these adds to the showing. His workshops and "art barn" in back of the main studio will also be open to visitors.

Interesting Volumes On Sale at Book Fair

Ashland—Anthologies, complete sets of standard literature, old editions and out-of-print volumes are to be found on the Tudor Guild Book Fair tables in the Stump Art Gallery.

Browsing through the assortment displayed in the gallery on the Plaza has become one of the tourist attractions for Ashland visitors. Recent finds have been a set of Somerset Maugham's novels; a 20-volume set of Sor Walter Scott's Waverley novels; another was a collection of "Greatest Short Stories"; a complete set of Bret Harte's writings, volumes on practical salesmanship, and a series of works on public school methods, edited and published by some of the pioneer 20th century educators in 1908.

Students of history, national and local, have discovered treasures. One such set is entitled "Messages and Papers of the Presidents" and covers the years from 1789 to 1898, while another set, "Columbian Historical Novels," presents a "complete history of America and the U.S.A. from the time of Columbus."

Children's books continue to be in demand with cook books running a close second in popularity. Those in charge of the Tudor Guild benefit project ask that persons having books to donate to the fair take them to the Stump Art gallery between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays or phone Mrs. Sidney Ainsworth, 482-0371, to have them picked up.

All proceeds from the book sales go toward the guild's Shakespearean scholarships.
