

Humphrey Family 'Windfall' Claimed To Be $2.6 Million

Disarmament Aired Again

Geneva—(UPI)—The United States and Russia turned their attention back to conventional weapons disarmament today but left the door open for possible direct negotiations on breaking the nuclear deadlock.

American sources said U.S. Ambassador Arthur H. Dean planned to stress the question of nuclear delivery vehicles in an address to the 17-nation disarmament conference.

Dean met for two hours Tuesday with Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Vasiliy Kuznetsov. They discussed the feasibility of U.S.-Soviet talks on a nuclear test ban treaty based on a compromise plan put forth by the eight unaligned conference participants.

Afterwards Dean said the proposal for direct bilateral talks, made by India and the United Arab Republic Monday, may come up later in a full conference session. He said "we may want to hear the views of other nations first."

In Washington it was reported that the United States is willing to consider an unpoliced ban on atmospheric, space and underwater tests.

Regarding nuclear delivery vehicles, Russia has proposed a 100 per cent cut in these during the first phase of disarmament while the U.S. plan calls for only a 35 per cent reduction.

The United States believes a 100 per cent cut would leave the Soviets in a position of military superiority in Europe at the end of the first phase, especially when coupled with Soviet demands for the dismantling of all foreign military bases during that period.

Cost of Contract Misrepresented, Senator Charges

Washington—(UPI)—A Democratic senator said today that George M. Humphrey and his family reaped windfalls of $2.6 million at taxpayer expense, partly because Humphrey's mining company "deliberately misrepresented" the cost of executing a government stockpile contract.

The charge was made by Sen. Clair Engle of California. He said Senate stockpile investigators intend to find out "just who is telling the truth" about a nickel mining-smelting contract between the government and Humphrey's mining company.

Humphrey was secretary of treasury in the Eisenhower administration.

Engle, a member of the stockpile subcommittee, said either Humphrey or Walter H. Henson, an accountant for the General Accounting Office, lied to the group.

Engle laid down a 12-point barrage against the multimillionaire Cleveland industrialist, which included the following accusations:

—The Hanna Mining Company, according to its own income tax returns, earned $10 million after taxes in seven years on an investment of $3.6 million.

—The government spent $22.3 million to build a smelter which the Hanna Smelting Co. was permitted to buy for $1.7 million.

—Humphrey and his immediate family held a 14 per cent interest in the mining and smelting companies. Engle said their share of $29.2 million mining profits, plus "windfalls" on the smelter amounted to $4 million after taxes.

Government Took Risk
—Hanna forced the government to take all the financial risk on the nickel contract, set up an intricate corporate structure to allow depletion write-offs on all profits and charged the government $1 million in "unauthorized" expenses.

Far West To Gain 10 Seats

MISSING GIRLS FOUND—Flashing smiles that portray the happy ending. Rita Ohlgren, left, and Teresa Morley pose for pictures after they were found unharmed by the FBI in a vacant apartment where they locked themselves in while playing. They disappeared from their Alexandria, Va., homes Sunday and were feared to be kidnap victims. (UPI)

Missing Children Located Unharmed

Alexandria, Va.—(UPI)—"Just to see her smile was worth a million dollars..."

The words summed up the reaction of Marine Maj. Arthur Ohlgren to the end of a tale that had the best of all possible endings. His daughter Rita and her playmate, Teresa Morley, had been found, safe and unharmed, after being missing for nearly two days.

Police had feared the two 7-year-olds had been kidnaped or slain. Their mothers had become so ill with worry that doctors had to place them under sedation.

The two days of agony began Sunday evening. The girls, like thousands upon thousands of other little girls, played in the apparent security and safety of their suburban development.

That was the last seen of them until Tuesday afternoon.

Area Combed
All Sunday night police and firemen, aided by hundreds of neighbors and other volunteers, combed through the wooded area surrounding the garden-type apartments in which the girls lived.

Searchers passed through an unoccupied apartment building adjoining Teresa's but found nothing.

LEAVES ON MISSION
Washington—(UPI)—Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson left today for the Middle East on a two-week mission aimed largely at reassuring Iran, Greece and Turkey of U.S. support despite shifts in foreign aid emphasis.

Sacramento, Calif.—(UPI)—The fast-growing Far West, mainly California, gains 10 seats in the House of Representatives this year and political experts predict most of them will go to the Democrats in the November elections.

UPI correspondents in 13 western states talked to governors, chairmen of both parties and to many of the candidates to assess the political outlook in the area. The consensus: Prospects are good for Democratic gains, mainly because of a reapportionment by a Democratic legislature in California.

President Kennedy, who visited California last week, clearly has high hopes in the West. In a recent news conference, he expressed belief that the outlook for his legislative program would improve if the Democrats would gain between 5 and 10 House seats in November.

"There is not a measure before us that I don't think we could pass with a change of five seats," he said.

The survey of western states showed that almost all Democratic candidates are supporters of the President.

GOP leaders such as National Chairman William E. Miller predict the Republicans will win the 44 seats they need to control the House. The consensus of political professionals in the West is that the Republicans will have to turn to other localities to score major increases.

The present lineup in the House is 282 Democrats, 174 Republicans and one vacancy. The survey of western politicians showed the Democrats had a good chance of winning 8 of the 10 new seats in the West, while Republicans were favored for the other two.

California, soon to become the first state in the nation in population, is the key state for both parties in the congressional fight.

Political leaders in California said they feel the gubernatorial contest between Republican Richard M. Nixon and Democratic incumbent Edmund G. Brown will have little influence in the 38 congressional races. The Brown-Nixon contest is rated so close it is not expected to be a factor.

At the present time, the 13 western states have 39 congressmen, 30 of them representing California where Democrats presently have a 16-14 edge. As a result of population surges during the past decade, the western states will have 69 representatives in the House next January, 38 of them coming from California.

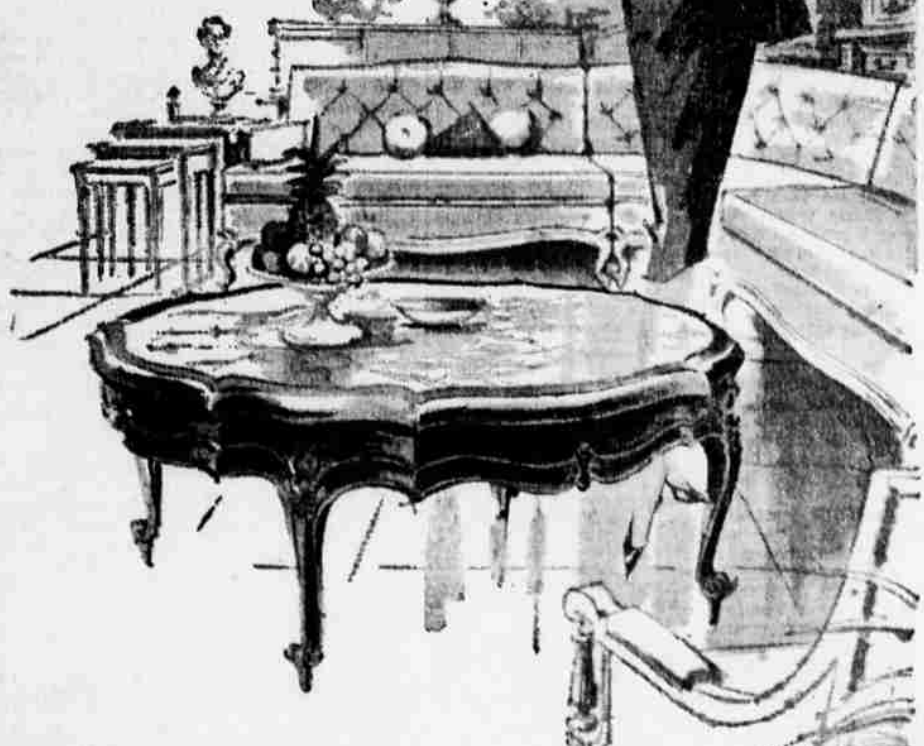

In 1891 a tariff law was passed in the United States requiring imports to show the country of origin.
