Florence J. — I see no good reason why he can't set a wedding date.
Abner R. — I don't want to count on her earnings. I don't want debts.
Florence J. — Ever since I was 19 and a trusting college girl, Abner has been telling me how much he loves me and that some day we'll surely be announcing our engagement. I'm 22 now, just out of college, and the proud possessor of a teaching license, but not an engagement ring. Abner has presented me with everything else but it isn't money. I'm sure, judging from the lavish way he entertains me. He's 27 and supposedly (at least the way he tells it) a big success in business.
 I certainly do love him, too, but the way to rub him the wrong way is to mention marriage. "Not until I can buy us a house free and clear," he says. He wants to save up a lot of cash first, to avoid loans and mortgages. It seems his father lost their home when a mortgage was called in, and Abner has an obsession about a cash reserve. Since I'd continue working after marriage and could help towards this goal, I can't understand what's really holding things up.
Abner R. — "Once bitten, twice careful." They say, and I'm being careful that my family will never have to go through what I went through when we were evicted from our home because my dad couldn't pay off our mortgage.
 I love Flo and I thought she was satisfied with my long-range plan to save up for the cash purchase of a home before I get married. In order not to make the waiting too hard for her, I've been taking her out to nice restaurants and Broadway shows, and I've given her some expensive presents. Certainly she knows I'm sincere.
 What's the terrible hurry? She's only 22. She can wait until I can offer her a secure roof over her head. Her promise to help out is sweet, but I've seen that arrangement even in when the bride becomes pregnant. She can't work, the debts pile up, and trouble's at the door. No, I'm drawing closer to my goal and I have my eye on a home. Flo will be glad she waited.

The Council: Along with Florence we'll chime in and wonder what Abner's real reason is for not being formally engaged to her and preparing to be married.
 Granted his childhood experience with a home-finance debacle was traumatic, he must know that taking a mortgage on a home is no disgrace, that it is the usual procedure, and that it is even the preferred procedure for wealthy purchasers who have the required cash on tap. Real estate and tax people inform us that there are some desirable aspects to mortgaging one's home. It need not be a tiger on Abner's back, as he fears.
 So we ask why this man, who insists he loves a girl and who affords to support her, should set so mountainous an obstacle in the path toward marriage? Is there more to this problem than meets the eye? Is Abner's source of income suspect, derived from shady dealings? Above all, why does he dissipate the "hoard" by buying Florence expensive gifts and squandering large sums on dates with her? Every $1,000 counts, you know.
 Our advice to Florence is to humor Abner a while longer, agreeing to wait until he has that wad-on-the-line under three conditions: First, that a reasonable time-limit be set; second, that Abner's sights be lowered to settle for less than a mansion, something modest; and third, that the House Fund have priority over all his expenditures, with no side tracks to race tracks or Caribbean cruises.
 But after that "reasonable" period, Florence may well begin dating other men. Who knows but that there's a vine-covered cottage in her future with a mortgage, and with someone else.

State Penitentiary Escapee Captured
 Salem — (AP) — Beverly Harris, 33-year-old Oregon Penitentiary inmate who fled July 1, was captured in Stockton, Calif., and returned here, the warden's office said today.
 Harris, serving three years for obtaining money under false pretenses in Klamath county, was a trusty when he escaped.
