While Wading in River
Woodland, Wash.—UPI—Airmen I/C Joseph D. Platt, 19, Shubuta, Miss., drowned in the Lewis river near here Thursday.

Platt, who could not swim, was wading and stepped into a deep hole. He was en route from Texas to Alaska.

TESTS SCHEDULED

New York—UPI—Former President Herbert Hoover was scheduled to undergo further tests today in a routine check-up at Columbia-Presbyterian hospital. A spokesman for the hospital said Thursday the condition of Hoover, 88, is generally good. He entered the hospital Monday.

Ben Bella Backers Claim Victory

Algiers—UPI—Backers of strongman Ahmed Ben Bella claimed today the socialist-leaning chief of the Algerian Political Bureau won a test of strength during riots with supporters of the nation's military leaders.

Ben Bella was cheered by a crowd of about 15,000 Thursday night in a demonstration in which dissident military leaders tried to rally support for their cause. They appeared badly outnumbered, however.

Windows were broken when rival factions fought in the streets outside the government-general building, in the Algiers forum. No one was injured, but police had to break up the riot with fire hoses.

FIRST STAMPS

New York—The first public postage stamp in the U.S. was put on sale in New York in 1845. It was not a U.S. stamp but one printed as a local experiment by the city's postmaster.

Banquet To Mark Anniversary of Sustained Yield

Salem—A banquet commemorating the 25th anniversary of the O&C Sustained Yield Act of 1937 will be held at the Marion Hotel here, Aug. 28, by the Association of O&C Counties, Darrell Jones, association president and commissioner of Clackamas county, has announced.

Guests at the banquet will be county, state, and federal officials connected with the administration of the Oregon and California Grant Lands, representatives of the Oregon Congressional delegation, and industry and civic leaders. The featured speaker will be former Oregon Gov. Charles A. Sprague, editor of the Oregon Statesman in Salem and chairman of the Bureau of Land Management's O&C Advisory Board.

Statutory Hallmark

Jones said that the O&C Sustained Yield Act of 1937 is one of the statutory hallmarks in the conservation and management of publicly owned natural resources. It put the theories of multiple use and sustained yield into practice. Under the O&C Act the Bureau of Land Management has developed one of the most successful public forestry enterprises in the nation.

Jones said the anniversary banquet would follow a full day of events highlighting BLM management of the O&C lands. In the morning BLM will conduct a tour of forest management areas, access roads, and public recreation sites for State advisory board members and county officials. In the afternoon there will be a special meeting of the O&C Advisory Board at the Marion Hotel. Karl S. Landstrom, national director of BLM, will be in Salem for the day's events, Jones said.

BLM recently distributed $15.4 million to the 18 western Oregon counties with O&C lands—their share of last year's timber sale receipts on the O&C.

CARS UNWELCOMED

Mackinac Island, Mich.—UPI—Cars that run on water are not welcomed ashore at this island in Lake Huron. Ivar Rapa, of London, Ont., found out Thursday after he proudly drove his new Amphicar across the Straits of Mackinac to a landing here. Cars are prohibited on the island, and Rapa got the first traffic ticket issued in decades.

SOAP USERS

New York—World consumption of soap normally amounts to about 10 billion pounds, and of this the U.S. consumers account for about one-third.

Political Football

Nothing in Estes Investigation Bears Resemblance to Grid Sport

By DICK WEST

Washington—UPI—A number of our more articulate members of Congress are fond of asserting that some thing or other is being used as a "political football." I dig most cliches but I have never figured out what that one means. Depending on how you interpret it, it could imply that the issue in question is being either kicked around, passed about or fumbled.

Not long ago the expression cropped up in connection with the Billie Sol Estes case, and that really baffled me. Nothing that I had observed in the congressional investigation of Estes seemed to bear any relation to football.

It appeared to me to be more like volleyball, or, if you prefer, badminton. A House government operations subcommittee would hold hearings for while on Estes' grain storage operations. Then a Senate government operations subcommittee would hold hearings for while on Estes' cotton allotment operations. Thea back to the House, and so on.

This ping pong procedure made the inquiry fairly easy to follow, provided the spectator did not develop a crick in his neck.

Lately, however, the two subcommittees have been holding hearings simultaneously, which is like no game that I ever heard of, but which bears some similarity to tug-of-war.

At the risk of developing schizophrenia, I attempted for a few hours Wednesday to follow both. They gave me a kaleidoscopic impression somewhat as follows:

The senators were questioning Harold E. Orr, an Amarillo, Tex., manufacturer about a mysterious $25,000 check.

Orr testified he signed the check at his request of sales, who promised it would not be cashed. That was the last he saw of it and for all he knows it may still be floating around some place.

But Orr said he wasn't worried about anyone trying to cash it because he didn't have enough money in the bank to cover it anyhow. Nor was he worried about being hauled into court on a cold check charge.

"If they want to sue me," he ruefully reported, "they've got to get in line."

Feeling a bit dizzy-headed, I switched over to the House where a report on a review of government grain shipments to Estes' elevators.

Ten investigators worked 350 hours on the review, which cost about $2,000. Their labors resulted in the discovery of $631 in freight overcharges. So there you have it, sport fans—the latest report on the big double-header. And now back to political football.
