

Walkins Distributor Named for Region

A new distributor for Walkins Products, Inc., has been named for Jackson and Josephine counties.

Jim Watkins, who was the firm's distributor in Klamath Falls for more than three years, is now serving the Rogue valley from the Medford office at 1414 South Stage rd. The former representative, Ed Roberts, is now the Walkins distributor in Siskiyou County.

Watkins said he plans to build a retail store at the Stage rd. location but it is only in the planning stage.

Small Worlds Around Us

By Lynn W. Walkins (Register & Tribune Syndicate, 1962)

Uses Ingenuity

Neither she nor any of her obnoxious sisters could have known it was going to rain within the next few hours. And if it didn't, all their efforts would have amounted to nothing.

So what prompts them to perform a duty which later seems to indicate they know what they were doing? Is it guerdon or what seems more likely, does the female mosquito know that the dry places at which she deposits her eggs may contain water at some foreseeable time?

No one ever attributed to the mosquito the faintest shred of sense. She does, however, sense that her eggs must be in water. And the female must complete their development by spending the first days of their lives in a watery environment. So she usually deposits her eggs in a pond or a puddle.

No Ponds

But there are many areas where no ponds are available; an ocean beach is such a place. If she is a creature which insists on fresh water, she is then in a bad way.

There are mosquitoes which live in areas where lakes and ponds are non-existent, where not even a backyard pool or stagnant water is present. In such cases she resorts to discarded tin cans filled with water and carefully left in alleys and vacant lots.

But there are no empty, discarded tin cans on an ocean beach. At least there shouldn't be. Back from the edge of the salt water, too, the area may be sandy and pondless. A short way from the shore there may be a few water-filled knotholes in old stumps or trees. There are some small puddles of fresh water at the base of some plants, but a female mosquito in a hurry cannot always find one of these places. But she is not stumped.

On an ocean beach are countless sea shells, both valves and univalves. The tide leaves many of these in an upright position. If rains come they remain water-filled for some time. They are all acceptable to an enterprising mosquito. It's easy to understand why she lays her eggs in these shells after a rain, or while they are water-filled. But the fact she does not always follow this procedure raises a perplexing question.

A close examination of empty shells which are bone dry inside reveals, at times, many mosquito eggs. Further observation also may reveal that heavy rains followed many of these egg depositions, as though Mrs. Mosquito had some idea rains would come to fill the shells and cover the eggs.

Of course, the rain and egg-laying might have just happened that way — or did it? Seems it's pretty difficult to fool a female mosquito.

Colored Texts Lend Inviting Appearance

New York — (AP) — Scientific, religious and school text books are getting a new look. No longer are they restricted to dull greens, browns, blues, blacks and other somber shades, according to Robert H. Weisman, president of J. P. Tapley company, book manufacturers.

Making a scientific book or a school or college text inviting in appearance has a psychological effect. It induces reading or study," Weisman said. "There's something about the appearance of a book looking volume that makes one reluctant to open it."
