

Quick Goldberg Approval Expected; Judicial Philosophy Unknown

Castro Mismanagement Seen Behind Russian Economic Help

Washington—(UPI)—President Kennedy's appraisal of the Soviet build-up in Cuba is that Premier Fidel Castro and his Government have so mismanaged the economy that Russia has had to rush in help.

An economic slow-down in Cuba and a record of crop failures have been largely responsible for the recent influx of Russian-made goods, foodstuffs and technicians. This seems to be the "main thrust" of Russian efforts in Cuba rather than a military buildup, according to the Chief Executive.

Cuba was among a number of subjects touched upon by the President in his news conference Wednesday. The crowd was small by comparison—208, and at least a fourth of these were visitors. But the conference was speedy and news-packed.

Kennedy opened with two major announcements, one of which caught this gossipy Capital by surprise. He announced the retirement of Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter and the selection of Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg to replace him.

Washington—(UPI)—The Supreme Court has lost its chief conservative and will get a labor specialist whose judicial philosophy has yet to reveal itself.

At age 79, on the advice of his doctors, Felix Frankfurter is retiring after nearly 24 years on the high court. President Kennedy has named as his replacement Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg, a 54-year-old lawyer whose public service began on the New Frontier.

Hardly a dissenting voice was raised in the political arena after the President announced the selection at his news conference Wednesday. It appeared the necessary Senate approval of Goldberg's nomination would be a matter of quick course.

Kennedy himself described Goldberg as "superbly qualified" for duty in a task that carries the ultimate in judicial prestige and responsibility.

Of Frankfurter, the President said few men have had a greater or more lasting impact on the nation's legal system. "We shall miss him," he said.

Kennedy explained that Frankfurter's health would not permit him to continue on the bench. The White House later released an exchange of letters in which the justice said his recovery from a recent stroke had not been sufficient to allow his return.

Frankfurter will retire at half pay—$17,500 a year.

Goldberg, who was in Chicago carrying out a typical assignment of trying to settle a labor dispute, thanked the President for choosing him and pledged every effort to "dedicate myself with all humility to this high office."

It was Kennedy's second opportunity, in his 19 months as President, to name a Supreme Court justice. What effect will this latest choice have on legal principles applied to final legal showdowns?

History demonstrates that minds which have not yet applied themselves to these vast, complex tasks simply cannot be read. Frankfurter, for example, was appointed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt at the height of a liberal resurgence, yet became the court's most conservative member.

It appeared safe to predict, however, that at least for the near future Goldberg's vote would lend at least some assistance to the liberals on issues where his opinion might prove decisive.

Should the new justice take a broad view of civil liberties cases—one of the major legal issues of the day—the only remaining members almost certain to dissent would be John M. Harlan and Tom C. Clark.

Another example of unpredictability: Frankfurter's chief philosophical adversary on the court has been Hugo L. Black, who is from a state not generally noted for its output of liberals—Alabama.

There were coincidences in Wednesday's development:—Both Frankfurter and Goldberg are Jews—the former an immigrant, born in Austria, the latter born in Chicago of immigrant parents.

Both are Democrats, and both spent considerable time in the private practice of law.

Both were picked for the post at a time when the nation was in a period of major political change, and when both political and public eyes were keeping a close watch on what the court was doing.

Foreign Briefs

BRITAIN'S NAZI LEADER FIRED FROM JOB
Coventry, England—(UPI)—Colin Jordan, leader of Britain's Nazi Movement, was fired Wednesday from his $2,800-a-year teaching job here.

Jordan, 39, said he would appeal the move by the local education committee. He currently is appealing a two-month jail term for incitement to violence because of riots surrounding London meetings of his National Socialist Party.

JAPAN PLANS HIGHEST RADAR STATION
Tokyo—(UPI)—The Japanese government Wednesday announced plans to build what it called "the world's highest radar" station on top of Mt. Fuji.

NUN'S GARB SHED FOR LION TAMER ROLE
Salford, England—(UPI)—Shirley Farmer has given up the life of a nun to become a lion tamer.

"I liked life in the convent," said Miss Farmer, 22, "but I wanted to be out and free. I particularly wanted to learn how to handle lions."

Stock Market Plurality Nets Minor Gains

New York—(UPI)—A small plurality of minor gains handled the stock market a limited gain today.

Autos and chemicals were narrowly scrambled along with rails. Utilities firmed but steels were a bit easier. United Aircraft faded over a point and so did Shell Oil but others in these groups showed little change.
