TELSTAR CALL — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown talks via the communications satellite Telstar to Gov. Gen. Johan Hogander of Stockholm, Sweden. The occasion Wednesday was the joint openings of the California State Fair and the St. Erik's Fair in Stockholm. To the left of Brown is Alf Ros, acting counsel general of Sweden, from San Francisco. He also participated in the 14-minute conversation. (UPI)

Doctor's Wife Remains Critical After Acid Burns

San Jose, Calif. —(UPI)— The blonde wife of a Hungarian doctor was still in critical condition today at Santa Clara County hospital, suffering from knife wounds and acid burns which her husband admitted inflicting on her.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Hajna de Kaplany, 25, suffered third degree acid burns over 60 per cent of her body and was injured internally. She had also been beaten and slashed with surgical instruments.

The husband, Dr. Geza de Kaplany, was held by San Jose police on a charge of attempted murder. Police said formal charges were held up pending the outcome of Mrs. De Kaplany's struggle for life.

Tied Hands, Feet

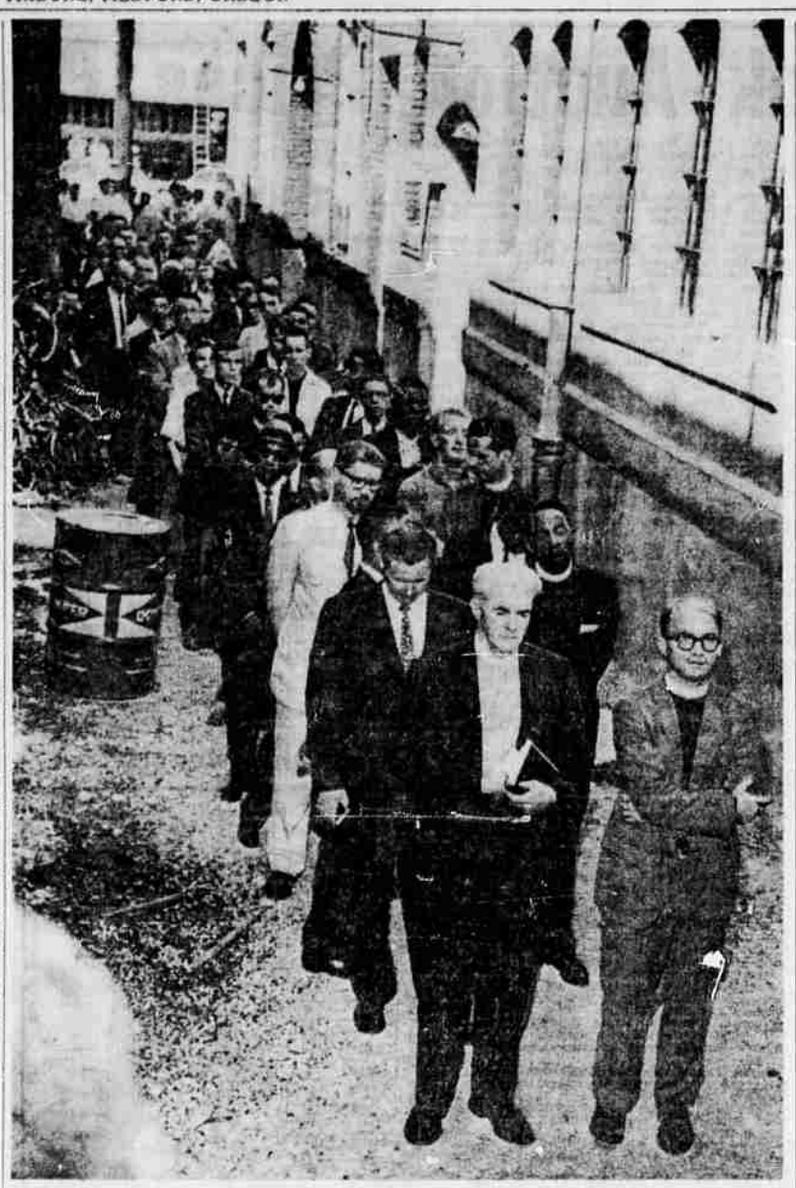
De Kaplany, 36, told police he tied the hands and feet of his beautiful bride of five weeks and threw acid over her nude body, after beating and slashing her.

"I did it to frighten her," police quoted him as saying, "to put fear into her for being an adultress. She's not going to die. I just wanted to take her beauty away."

"I know for a fact that she has been unfaithful," he added.

From her hospital bed, Mrs. De Kaplany, a former showgirl and fashion model, denied that she had been unfaithful.

Both Dr. De Kaplany and his wife were Hungarian refugees who came to this country after the revolution of 1956.



LINE UP IN ALLEY — A group of 75 ministers from the East and Midwest lines up in an alley alongside police headquarters in Albany, Ga., Tuesday after their arrest. The preachers were arrested when they failed to obey police orders to move on after holding a prayer service in front of city hall. The group came to Albany to help the integrationist Albany movement in its protests of city segregation practices. (UPI)

BUBBLE BATH FOR ALL

Portland, Maine — (UPI) — Bubbles spewed from a fountain in downtown Portland all day Wednesday. Police said someone had dumped a package of soap into the fountain.

Comparison of Drawings Made Between Nepalese, Eugene Area Children

Eugene — The IQs of children in Nepal decline in the older age groups when their drawings are compared with those of American children, a University of Oregon psychologist told a national meeting in St. Louis, Mo., today.

Dr. Norman D. Sundberg, associate professor of psychology, read his report on the opening day of the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association. Co-author of the paper is Thomas O. Ballinger, associate professor of art and education at the university.

The cross-cultural comparative study, believed to be the first psychological research ever conducted among the Nepalese people, was made on the basis of the drawings of man, woman, and self done by almost 900 Nepalese school children and some 180 American school children from Eugene and environs.

Standardized Score

When the drawings were scored by a standardized method, it was found that the Nepalese average IQ dropped steadily from approximately 100 at the ages of 6 and 7, the same as American students, to an average of 72 at the age of 13.

"In view of the average scores obtained at ages 6 and 7, an hypothesis of intellectual inferiority for the nation would seem invalid," Dr. Sundberg said.

The study points up the difficulties of conducting cross-cultural comparisons, using the present standard psychological tests, Dr. Sandberg indicated. Noting that this was only an exploratory study, the psychologist pointed out that the test used, the Draw-A-Man standard psychological test, was apparently not broad enough to record and give credit for cultural differences.

Cultural Factor

"Some cultural factor is influencing the scores made . . . by Nepalese children, a..d . . . the effect of this factor more strongly influences the score as the age of the child increases," he said.

The apparent IQ differences might be explained by the facts that drawing is not a part of the Nepalese culture, the society does not bestow any awards for drawing except in the case of some special religious groups, the children had not had previous art education in school, and in fact, Nepalese artists belong to the lowest caste in their society.

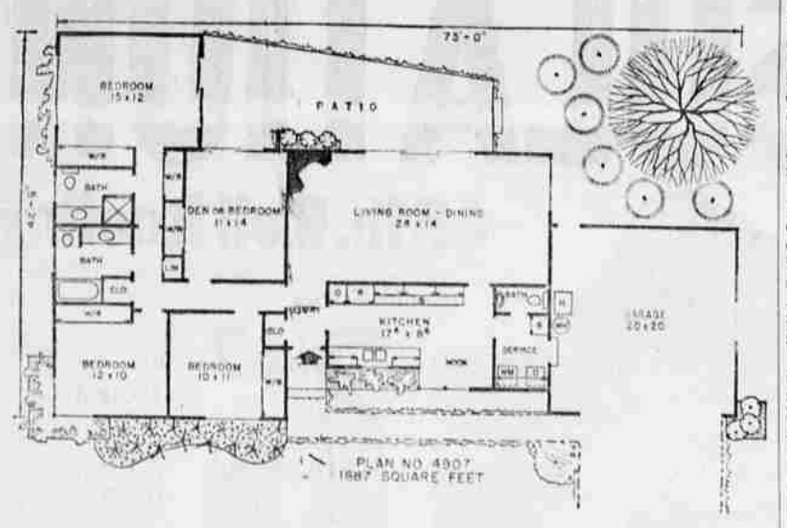
The Nepalese child, living in a highly rigid, ritualistic, traditional society in which he knows exactly what is expected of him, does not have to learn and, indeed, survive by observation as does the American child, and thus may not notice and include in his drawings as many of the features of the human body on which the test is scored.

Drawings Collected

The drawings were collected by native teachers between 1956 and 1958 under the supervison of Ballinger, who spent two years in Nepal as part of the University of Oregon-Nepal education project of the past decade.

In this project, the university was charged with establishing plans for an elementary school system and teacher training procedures under an agreement among the government of Nepal, the U.S. state department, and the International Cultural Administration.

Ballinger was assisted by two former Nepalese graduate students at the University, Bluwan Lal Joshi, who received his master's degree in psychology in 1956, and Panna Lal Pradhan, who received his Ph. D. in psychology this year.



This Week's Ranch and Modern Home

By HIAWATHA ESTES

There's plenty of design interest in this home — the kind that makes one house a stand-out in any neighborhood. It also provides an uncluttered plan that combines good looks, comfort and livability.

The unique oriental styling of the exterior has been achieved by combining several design features. The cedar shake roof — which could be replaced by shingles if economy is necessary — has two different roof slopes. A false beam projects from the top of each roof gable.

Stone veneer is specified on both the garage and house while the same stone has been used in forming several different shaped and height planters. The windows are framed by heavy pieces of vertical wood on the front elevation and are also used between the windows to form panels of stucco. If preferred, this stucco can be replaced with vertical wood siding. The same vertical pattern has been used on the garage door.

Protected Entry Way

From the entry door, which is protected from the elements, there is convenient circulation to all rooms of the house.

The kitchen and its generous cabinet space are located so as to serve both the oversized nook and the dining area with ease and efficiency. The nook is well lighted by corner louver windows.

The forced air furnace and water heater are in the garage. The garage which is now directly conected to the house could be separated by a breezeway during construction if the lot is of sufficient width.

Outstanding Feature

The outstanding feature of this home is the large combined living room-dining area. Wide sliding glass doors which let in sunshine and provide a view of the outdoors lead from this room as well as the master bedroom and den to the spacious rear patio.

The family and master bath are back-to-back and both have pullman lavatories.

The master bedroom has two wardrobes. A shoulder high window provides cross ventilation without interfering with furniture arrangement.

Complete working drawings for this plan can be purchased at a cost of $7.50 for the first set and $3 for each additional set when ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these prices until Dec 19. Please allow two to three weeks for delivery. If the above home does not entirely meet with your approval, a new home plan book, Ranch and Modern Homes, can be purchased for $2. Send all orders for either plans or books to Hiawatha Estes, post office box 404-T, Northridge, Calif.

Do-It-Yourself Novel

New Invention Motivates West To Alter Plots of American Classics

By DICK WEST

Washington — (UPI) — I read the other day that someone in France had invented an all-purpose, do-it-yourself novel. The book consists of situations and scenes that are more or less interchangeable. By moving the pages around, the reader can devise his own plots and manipulate the characters as he sees fit.

West

I think this is a bully idea and I'm hoping it will be universally adopted and made retroactive.

There is no reason why we, as readers, should have to accept, or be stuck with, a book as it was originally written.

If we don't like the ending, say, or something that happens in the third chapter, we should be able to change it to suit our own tastes. After all, it's our $5.95.

Marking Novels

In fact, I have already been going through my bookshelves marking the novels that I intend to shuffle around as soon as they become available in convertible editions.

I think I'll begin with "Moby Dick." I never could understand why Melville had Capt. Ahab and his crew perish in the pursiut of the white whale.

By rearranging the pages, it should be possible to have them capture the whale and haul it back to port. I visualize a triumphant return with a band playing on the dock, tough old seadogs wiping tears from their eyes, and the women folk serving hot coffee and doughnuts.

I also am longing to get my hands on a loose-leaf edition of "Huckleberry Finn." I plan to take some of its pages and mix them up with portions of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The way I see it, Huck will be a young rock-and-roll singer who is being chased across the frozen Mississippi by a talent scout. You can hear a pack of autograph hunters baying in the distance.

Eventually, Huck is joined by Tom Sawyer, who has run away from home because Aunt Polly wouldn't let him play the banjo. So they team up with little Eva and get a job providing folk music for a coffee house.

I fancy, however, that the greatest opportunity for creative reading will be offered by "Gone With The Wind." I think I'll retain the basic plot but shift the locale to reflect my Texas antecedence.

Thus will Scarlett O'Gonzales fall in love with Rhett Crockett during the siege of the Alamo.

Assessed Value Of Property Slips

Salem —(UPI)— Although the true cash value of Oregon property is at an all-time high, the assessed value has slipped.

The reason for the smaller assessed value is that Multnomah county is now computing assessed value on the basis of 36 per cent rather than 40 per cent.

Statistics on property values and assessments were made public by the State Tax commission.

True cash value in the state is $10,898,740,106, an increase of almost $250 million over last year.

Assessed value is down $26 million.

Green Bay, Wis. — (UPI) — A deputy sheriff stopped Lorenza Hammacke of Lawrenceville, Va., near here Wednesday to remind him that he left his wife at a service station 24 miles back.

BUILDING HOUSE — Members of Roxy Ann Grange are in the process of building a home for one of their members on Poorman's creek off the west fork of Griffin Creek rd. The home, shown partially completed above, is for the Paul Dalton family, which has been active in the Roxy Ann Grange for several years. More than 400 hours of work have gone into the home by Grange members on week ends. Grange members plan to complete the structure before winter.
