

Public, Private Power Interests Clash Over Plan

Washington—(UPI)—Public and private power interests clashed Wednesday over a recommendation by Army Engineers that Knowles Dam be one of four major projects to be built in the Columbia River basin.

Maj. Gen. William F. Cassidy, deputy chief of the Corps of Engineers, recommended to a Senate Public Works subcommittee that the dam be built at an estimated cost of $247 million.

But Cassidy declined to take a stand on private or public development when asked by Sen. Hiram L. Fong (R-Hawaii) whether it would be possible to have private development of the Knowles site.

"Yes, sir," Cassidy said. "It's a matter for Congress to decide whether we have federal development or private licensing."

Oregon Projects
Cassidy recommended that the Knowles, China Gardens, Asotin and Bruce Eddy Dams be built. In addition, he recommended the Strube Re-Regulating Reservoir, Gate Creek, Fern Ridge and Cascadia Projects in the Willamette Basin of Oregon.

He estimated total cost of the program at $670,670,000. Cassidy said the Army's recommendations included deferral of construction of the High Mountain Sheep, Penny Cliffs, Garden Valley and Flathead Lake outlet projects.

Former Montana Gov. J. Hugo Aronson criticized the proposed Knowles Dam project as "a backward step" which would "turn Montana into a mud-flat for downstream interests."

Aronson, a Republican, told the committee that the dam would flood 59,000 acres of land needed for ranching and agriculture.

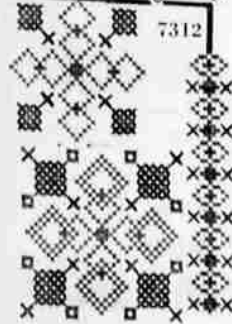

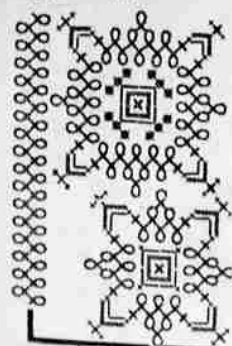

Winners of Station Scholarships Noted

John H. Flett, 1407 Sailing ave., Medford, won a $100 scholarship award offered by KSHA radio station in Medford, station officials have announced.

James Albright, 1678 Orchard Home dr., Medford, was named winner of the $50 scholarship. The two men were among 1,500 registrants for the award, according to station officials.

Flett is the father of six children and will give the scholarship to his son, Mike, who will attend college this fall. Albright will attend Oregon State university this year.
