

100 Students Are Expected in OSU Honors Program

Corvallis — More than 100 entering freshmen are expected to participate in the School of Science Honors Program this school year at Oregon State University.

The Honors Program was started three years ago to "enrich educational opportunities for the more able students and to recognize scholarly achievement. The number of students in the program has increased markedly each year.

Last spring term, there were 68 freshmen included, 54 sophomores, 24 juniors and 19 seniors.

A faculty council directs the program with Dr. C. L. Anderson, professor of hygiene and health education, as chairman.

Work in Program

Under the program, students are enrolled in honors sections in various science departments; do extra work such as special readings, research and seminars; and take some special classes during their four college years. At graduation, they receive diplomas that indicate honors in their specific fields.

To be eligible for the honors program, an entering freshman must have ranked in the top 20 per cent of his or her graduating class, have all A or B grades in science and mathematics courses, and have the recommendation of the high school principal or science teacher.

Sophomores and juniors may apply for the honors program if their grades are above a B average and if they want to pursue the stepped-up study program that lets students go "faster and farther" in their college work. If the extra study load of the honors program proves too demanding, students may withdraw from the program at any time and resume their normal course schedules, Dr. Anderson explained.

Students are expected to maintain an overall grade average of B to continue in the program.

The barbed wit and sage observations of Will Rogers can be heard again in "The Story of Will Rogers" Friday at 8:30 p.m. on KMED-TV.

As one of the most famous figures of his day, Rogers was covered by cameras so well that about 75 per cent of the TV biography consists of motion picture footage. In addition still photographs and excerpts from his radio broadcasts are used to show Will Rogers the humorist, cowboy, comedian, humanitarian, actor, philosopher, world traveler and goodwill ambassador.

Be Hope is narrator. "Anatomy of the House — Part One," the second in NBC News' special pre-election series, follows the Will Rogers story at 8:30 on KMED-TV. On-the-scene film reports of candidates in their campaign activity in Connecticut, New York, Florida, Texas, Virginia and North Carolina will be presented. Newsmen John Chancellor, Bill Ryan, Frank McGee and Merrill Mueller will explain the issues and consider the relative strength of the political rivals.

WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS, 4 p.m. Saturday KMED-TV. Eight of the country's best men and women bowlers will compete in the World's Mixed Doubles Championships at Kansas City, Mo.
