Congressional Candidate Tours Three County Area

During the past four days Robert B. Duncan, speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives and Democratic candidate for Congress for the Fourth District, has appeared in Lane, Coos, and Josephine counties.

Speaking Saturday at the annual meeting of the Coos-Curry Co-op in Brookings, he favored a political climate where both public and private power flourish.

"Immediately our problem is to eliminate the waste that appears in our hydro-electric program in the Northwest," he said.

Duncan recommends converting the heat from the reactor at Hanford into prime electrical energy, construction of transmission lines of high capacity to carry Bonneville Dump power to California, and urged the constant search for economical production of electrical energy from other sources.

Depressed Area
In Grants Pass, Duncan told an audience at the Redwoods hotel, that Josephine county, as a depressed area, should be qualified to receive public works expenditures under the recent Congressional legislation which appropriated 900 million dollars for public works.

Douglas and Coos counties although not designated as depressed areas, should also be qualified because of substantial unemployment in these counties. Duncan urged the construction of new access roads, in the three counties.

Earlier in Springfield he told the Chamber of Commerce that the growth of government which serves no useful purpose must be resisted by everyone.

While in the area he also attended the McKenzie Island Democratic meeting where he pointed out the importance of political participation by all citizens.

Washington - (UPI) - Senate leaders said Saturday they wanted a thorough look at the House version of President Kennedy's United Nations bond bill before deciding whether to ask the Senate to accept House changes.

Democratic Whip Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.) said the leadership also wanted to get the views of the White House and State Department on the varying versions of authority for the United States to finance up to $100 million of a proposed $200 million United Nations bond issue.

Washington - (UPI) - Oregon's Congressional delegation split 3-1 Friday as the House voted 256-134 to pass the United Nations bond bill.

Democrats Edith Green and Al Ullman and Republican Walter Norblad voted for the bill. Republican Edwin Durno voted against it.

If the leaders decide against trying to win Senate approval of the House version, passed Monday, Wednesday and next Friday, the measure will go to a House-Senate conference committee for differences to be worked out.

Humphrey said the money provisions of the bills were not too far apart. However, he said, the Democratic leaders wanted to make sure the House bill did not go too far in forcing the United Nations to crack down on members who had not paid their assessments.

No decision on a course of action was expected before early next week.

President Kennedy told speaker John McCormack in a letter last Wednesday that amendments added by the House Foreign Affairs Committee were "wholly satisfactory." The House group, led by Thomas E. Morgan (D-Pa.), hopes the Senate will accept all of the changes and thus make unnecessary another fight on the House floor over the measure.

The Senate bill would authorize U. S. "loans" to the United Nations rather than outright bond purchases, although the administration said the language would achieve the same purpose. It would provide for $25 million of such loans, plus matching of purchases by other countries up to a maximum of $100 million.

The House bill would permit purchases only up to the extent of those by other UN members and in no case more than $100 million.

The House measure also would bar the use of U. S. funds to reduce the debt other countries owe the United Nations. In the past, millions of dollars of special U. S. contributions have helped reduce the UN debts of about 60 nations, including several Iron Curtain countries.

Reservation Property Announced for Sale

Portland - (UPI) - The Department of Interior announced Saturday that 45 tracts of land totaling 2,486 acres on Indian reservations in western Washington have been put up for sale.

The department said the western Washington agency of the Bureau of Indian Affairs is handling the sale. The tracts range in size from three to 194 acres, the department said.

Attempt to Outlaw Betting on Races Defeated by Group

Salem - (UPI) - An attempt to outlaw the only form of gambling permitted in Oregon - betting on horse and dog races - was defeated Saturday by Oregon's constitutional revision commission.

The action came on a motion by Oregon Supreme Court Justice Alfred T. Goodwin who suggested that a new state constitution forbid all gambling. His motion lost, 7-6. Nine votes are needed for passage.

The present constitution forbids only lotteries, although other forms of gambling - except horse and dog betting - are forbidden by statute.

Goodwin declared it "a shame" that county fairs in Oregon are supported from racing revenues.

Those voting for Goodwin's motion, in addition to Goodwin, were State Rep. Stafford Hansell (R-Hermiston); Hans Linde, Eugene; State Sen. Thomas Mahoney (D-Portland); Justice Kenneth O'Connell; Rudie Wilhelm, Portland, and State Rep. George Layman (R-Newberg).

Three Injured in Two Auto Accidents

Three people were injured in two auto accidents on Jackson county highways Friday, state police reported Saturday.

Beverly Jean Canham, 34, of Route 2, Box 422, Gold Hill, was treated at the Crater Osteopathic hospital for a scalp wound and numerous abrasions and released.

The car which she was driving was eastbound on the Sams Valley highway when Mrs. Canham took her eyes off the road to light a cigarette, she told police. Moderate damage resulted when the car went over a bank. Mrs. Canham was taken to the hospital by a passing motorist.

Sen. L. Clement, 41, and Deborah Lynn Clement, 14, both of 2549 Lucky Lane, Medford, were treated for facial cuts at Rogue Valley hospital and released.

They were passengers in a car driven by Robert Dale Clement, 42, of 2549 Lucky Lane. It and a car driven by Theodore Herbert Crawford, 44, 531 Berrydale Ave., Medford, collided as Crawford started to turn left from Stewart Ave. onto Orchard Home Dr.

Hillsboro - (UPI) - Services were scheduled at the Bethany Baptist church Saturday for Chris R. Rich, 93, who died Wednesday at his home here. Founder of the Rich and Sons Nursery at Oreno, Rich was associated with the nursery industry in Oregon for more than half a century.
