

Medford Youth Hurt In Bike Accident

Arthur Mapp Luer III, 21, of 25½ Myers Court, Medford, suffered head injuries when he lost control of his motor bike while attempting a turn Sunday afternoon.

Authorities at Sacred Heart hospital said his condition was satisfactory today.

According to city police, Luer lost control of his vehicle as he attempted to turn the corner at Eighth and Elm sts. about 3:24 p.m.

OSU Horsemen's Short Course Slated Oct. 6-7

Corvallis—One of the West Coast's leading authorities on horses will be featured instructor at the 7th annual Oregon horsemen's short course, Oct. 6 and 7 at Oregon State University.

Dr. J. P. Hughes, University of California veterinarian, heads a list of eight lecturers and judges for the course. He will lecture on the reproductive systems of the horse—their malfunctions and corrective measures.

The course is open to anyone 18 years of age or older with registration starting Oct. 6 at 8 a.m. in OSU's Wilbycombe Auditorium. Registration fee is $10.

A special film showing on Arabian, Appaloosa, and Quarter Horses is scheduled prior to the short course, Oct. 5, at the auditorium, starting at 7:30 p.m. reported A. W. Oliver, OSU professor emeritus of animal science in charge of the course.

Instruction also will include classes in judging mares of the Arabian, Appaloosa, Quarter Horse, and Tennessee Walking breeds on Oct. 7. Judges will be L. R. Armstrong, nationally-recognized Arab judge from Olympia, Wash.; Dr. M. W. Ickes, Nampa, Idaho, veterinarian and judge and director of the American Quarter Horses Breeders Association; and Rudy Setzler, Washington State University animal scientist and horse judge.

Demonstrations. Armstrong, Dr. Ickes, and Joe Biles, Beaverton horse trainer, will also conduct performance demonstrations with breeds and types of horses. Other lecturers for the course are J. C. Miller, OSU Animal Science Department head, and J. E. Oldfield, OSU animal science nutritionist.

All lecturers and judges will participate in a panel discussion Oct. 6 at 8:30 p.m. dinner in OSU's Memorial Union.

Persons wishing to make advance registration may send registration fees to: Horsemen's Short Course, Business Office, Oregon State University, Corvallis.

Public Hearings Set For Oct. 24 In Salem Offices

Salem—The state department of agriculture has called three public hearings, involving feed, fertilizer and pesticide regulations, to run consecutively beginning at 10 a.m. Oct. 24. They will be held in the department headquarters in Salem.

The suggested changes have been worked out in advance studies with industry committees, experts at Oregon State University and other state agencies in related fields, according to Chief Chemist J. D. Patterson.

Proposals in the pesticide field are in line with the state program to safeguard proper use of highly toxic materials, and to prevent their use in highly populated areas and in home gardens. If adopted as the department will present it, this regulation will add endosulfan and phosphamidon to the present list of products restricted to use of commercial applicators and will remove Guthion and trithion from the restricted list.

Proposals Revised
The pesticide proposals have been reviewed not only with the state university and Oregon State Board of Health but also with the U.S. Public Health office at Wenatchee, Washington, Patterson says.

The suggested changes in fertilizer regulations update previous lists, recognize new findings and are in line with recommendations of the Soil Science Society of America. The department would add choline and sodium to permissible supplemental plant foods and reduce by half the present minimum level required for copper and manganese.

The hearing on animal regulations will relate to registration, labeling and misbranding of these products in line with the new 1961 law. Copies of one or all of the proposed regulations are available from the department headquarters, 158 12th St., N.E., Salem 10.

Missing Turner Hunter Located

Silverton—UPP—A search for a missing hunter, Edward Davidson, 22, Turner, ended Monday afternoon when he turned up safely about 15 miles from the point where he disappeared Sunday.

Some 20 men launched a search for Davidson in the Abiqua Basin area southwest of here early Monday after a companion, Jerry West of Salem, reported Davidson missing.

The two had split up and Davidson failed to return Sunday afternoon.

Predatory Animal Program Faces Federal Fund Cut

Salem—A four per cent cut in federal funds available for predatory animal and rodent control in Oregon, retroactive to July 1, concerned the cooperative advisory committee at its September meeting in Salem at state department of agriculture.

First report of the cut came to Melvin D. Smith, district agent for the Fish and Wildlife Service which is participant in the Oregon program to which the agriculture department and state game commission contribute state funds. Counties are even heavier contributors than the combined state agencies.

Confronted with the reduction, the Oregon committee was inclined to view it as contrary to the spirit and intent of the agreement between the state and the federal government and is so advising Washington.

To Study Economies
At the same time, the advisory group decided to hold to its 1962-63 program objectives and to determine if economies can be realized that will absorb at least a portion of the indicated federal reduction.

John McKean of the game commission is chairman of the advisory committee, with other participants Smith's office, the state department of agriculture, state game commission and the Oregon extension service.

In fiscal 1961-62, the federal government put $105,494 into the Oregon program; the state department of agriculture, $49,944; the state game commission $36,038; and the 32 cooperating counties, $167,378. Private groups interested in the program contributed another $10,816, bringing the total Oregon expenditures to $369,870 last year.

Last year the state-federal hunters took 9692 predatory animals and 4,897 nuisance animals. The program also conducted the startling control and treated thousands of acres for rodent control.

Coyotes taken (6739) topped the predatory animals, with bobcat, bear and mountain lions in this category. The nuisance animals taken included porcupine, badgers, skunks, raccoons, opossum, nutria and a weasel.
