By MARGARET SCHULER

An American newcomer to Rome said, as she lounged luxuriously in warm September sun at an outdoor coffee table, "Why don't we do this in Oregon? Our weather is like this." But can you conceive of Americans sitting hours, at a little table on a 15c cup of coffee, or Coca Cola? Can you imagine the state of mind of a waiter at such a lingering, or a proprietor, who is paying, what is it, a dollar and a half an hour for his help?

Life at the coffee tables begins circa nine in the morning when the older gentlemen and gentle ladies step out to buy their morning papers, (which they do at the little kiosk news stands, at any corner).

They have their first cup of "kaffee expresso" accompanied often by a croissant or brioche. They meet their friends, they visit, discuss news and read at their favorite bar. One dear, little elderly Hungarian woman brings, in a string bag, a little cushion to sit on. She has an umbrella and her cane, along with her reading material.

Not Limited The morning clientele is by no means limited to Italians. You may hear four or five conversations going on in different languages. Certain older Americans seem to enjoy, and indulge in this morning pastime too. It comes twelve o'clock and the customers disappear.

From one to four o'clock, all is quiet. Iron curtains shutter shop windows tourists tread alone. Siesta hours end at four and life again resumes its normal buzz.

Again, the oldsters come but along come also more and still more, young people, tourists and others. By six all tables are at a premium, and waiters rush about with their little trays and cups.

At nine again the tables are not so crowded. Presumably, the elderly have gone home to bed. Dinner in Rome is any time from eight thirty to ten o'clock. Another crowd, entirely different, assembles later on. This is the cafe sophisticates. And if you go past any time up until two thirty, you will see bright and gay lights and crowds.

Cafe Bar More unusual and curious to the foreigner, the American, than the outdoor tables is the cafe bar. The phenomenon, in this instance, occurs inside a doorless entrance, a large or small, simple or luxurious place. Here, crowds gather from eleven on in the morning; something like the atmosphere of a cocktail party develops. They may drink cognac, milk, liquors, coffee, vodka or American cocktails.

They may eat anything from the famous Italian gnocci, a delectable dumpling, pizzas, sandwiches, croquettes, even chicken, beef and potatoes. They may choose ice creams of great variety and taste-tempting beauty from glass cases.

Membership Drive Discussed By Club Central Point—Mrs. Norman Slinger, assisted by Mrs. Marion Stark, were hostesses at the meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America, held recently at the home of Mrs. Stinger in Eagle Point.

A business meeting followed the luncheon. A membership campaign to be conducted by the members of the club, was discussed. It was decided that the recent money earned by the grab bag sale would be applied to the purchase of a hearing aid. The club aids and supports the handicapped, and this particular project is a joint venture with other groups throughout the state.

Surprise Surprise your guests with a meringue covered dessert. Make six large pancakes, using a mix. Cool. Spread pancakes liberally with strawberry preserves and stack in six layers on a cookie sheet. Make meringue by beating three egg whites until frothy. Gradually beat in one-quarter cup of sugar and beat until stiff. Cover tops and sides of pancake stack with meringue and bake 12 to 15 minutes in preheated 350-degree oven. Serve hot, cut into 6 wedges.

Information To Be Given Seniors

Rogue Valley Pan Hellenic women outlined methods to provide information about college sororities to senior girls at all Rogue valley high schools during a meeting October 4 in the home of Mrs. John S. Humphrey, 340 Lindero avenue.

Representatives from 16 sorority alumnae groups attended.

Plans also were made for the next regular meeting to be held in April.

Crunchy

Crunchy ice cream roll is easy to make. Toast one cup of uncooked rolled oats 10 minutes in a shallow pan in a preheated 350-degree oven. Mix oats with one-half cup each of sifted confectioners' sugar and chopped nutsmeats and one-third cup of melted butter. Press firmly onto all sides of one pint of firmly-frozen vanilla ice cream. Return to freezer to chill well. Slice and serve with chocolate sauce, whipped cream and maraschino cherries. Serves 4.
