Witnesses Hear Supervisor Talk Of Armageddon

Some 1,254 Jehovah's Witnesses were at the Central Point's Junior High gymnasium Sunday to hear Lester M. Dugan, northwest district supervisor of the Witnesses, speak.

"Mankind is faced with four great threats of survival from within itself—chemical, bacteriological, radiological warfare and atomic fallout," he said. "But exceeding these threats to mankind will be the war of the great day of God the Almighty—Armageddon."

Stressing the way the mighty nations of the world have withered and died, Dugan quoted the following sequence as evidence from world history: "From bondage to spiritual faith, spiritual faith to great courage, courage to liberty, liberty to abundance, abundance to selfishness, selfishness to complacency, complacency to apathy, apathy to dependence, and from dependence back to bondage."

Dugan said that the war of Armageddon will end this repetitious cycle of the nations. The human family needs to become cognizant of this war of Armageddon as they will have no control over it nor can anyone avoid it.

Saturday's program included the baptism and ordination of ten new ministers of the faith. Due to the expansion of the organization, said to be the fastest growing in the world, Dugan announced that a revision of the circuit arrangement for the entire West coast has become necessary, thus forming three new circuits comprised of some 15 congregations per circuit in California alone, ten of these congregations will be taken from a Oregon circuit to form a California circuit.

Jerald McGrew Is Elected to Board

Jerald McGrew, Medford lumberman, has been elected to membership in the board of trustees of Keep Oregon Green association, according to Robert Konkin, association president.

McGrew will succeed his father Melvin McGrew, who has been promoted to senior associates of Keep Oregon Green.

Election of Jerald McGrew followed the 21st annual meeting, last week at Portland, of the Keep Oregon Green association with the state's radio, television and press representatives.

Mormons End General Meeting

Salt Lake City—More than 8,000 Mormons returned home today from the 132nd semi-annual general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, charged with carrying the gospel to their fellowmen.

LDS president David O. McKay addressed the closing session Sunday afternoon, saying, "We have a destiny which makes us brothers."

The three-day conference in the tabernacle on temple square here drew thousands of Mormon faithful from around the country and some from overseas, all of whom sustained the church leaders and approved a new member of the Council of the Twelve.

Nathan E. Tanner, prominent Western Canadian political and industrial leader, was named an apostle, succeeding the late George Q. Morris who died in April. He was proposed for the position by the 89-year-old McKay. Tanner, 64, has been an assistant to the Council.

Three Hunters Die During Week End

Oregon's deer hunting death toll was eight today following three deaths during the week end.

The victims were Clarence Hodson, 36, Portland; Curry County Judge Fernley Long, 32, Gold Beach, and Oren Fowler, 44, Portland.

Hodson was the state's third accidental shooting victim. Long and Fowler died of heart attacks.

The shooting occurred in the Green mountain area east of Sweet Home. State police said Hodson was killed from a bullet fired when Ronald Hodson, 18, Lebanon, the victim's cousin and hunting partner, tripped and fell and his rifle discharged.

Long, a Republican who was elected to his position in 1960, suffered his attack near Chemult Saturday. His body was found Sunday. Long's term expires in 1965.

Three Non-Injury Crashes Checked

Medford city police checked three non-injury vehicle accidents in the city Sunday. Three drivers were cited, police said.

Gary Robert Waller, 23, Grants Pass, was cited for disobeying a stop sign after his car collided with a vehicle operated by Stanley Carroll Jones Jr., 40, of 125 North Ivy st., about 12:47 p.m. at 10th and Vancouver sts., according to police.

James Russell Wallis, 18, of 1380 Sweet rd., was cited by police for failure to leave information at the scene of an accident after his car struck a parked vehicle registered to James M. and Martha A. Jent, 222 North Columbus ave., about 12:20 p.m. The Jent vehicle was parked on Riverside ave. between Eighth and Main sts.

A third driver, David Martin Nabbs, 17, of 185 Schultz st., was cited for violation of basic rule after his car collided with a vehicle operated by Patricia Irene Kennedy, 18, of 1417 Johnson st., about 2:08 p.m. at Bennett and Crater Lake aves., police stated.

Paper Rolls Are Spilled in Accident

Several large rolls of paper were spilled on Front st. early Saturday when the trailer of the truck carrying them turned over as the driver was attempting a turn, according to Medford city police.

The truck driver, George Corwin Taylor, 39, Portland, told police the load shifted as he turned from Fifth st. onto Front st. about 5:30 a.m.

The trailer flipped over on its side. No injuries were reported and no citation was issued, police said.

Who Says You Can't Teach An Old Dog New Tricks?

Someone who most certainly didn't know what he was talking about once said, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

It is doubtful whether this even applies to man, mouse or dog, but it has no meaning when applied to dogs. An old dog surely can be taught new tricks and will, if treated kindly, be eager to learn them.

We watched as an old dog moved with his owners into a new neighborhood. The dog acted misused, for he sulked a couple of days and hung around the front porch. He spent more time indoors than outdoors, watching from the security of the front steps the other dogs that, for their part, acted strangely too. They seemed to know a stranger had moved into their territory.

A couple of days later the old dog ventured out to the curb. Very obviously he was familiarizing himself with the neighbors, both human and canine. The established dogs of the neighborhood now approached the newcomer; then they would lose their courage and trot off down the street as if they suddenly remembered an appointment elsewhere. Days later they stopped, and some even ventured into the yard.

Worry Arises

In the meantime, the dog's owner, a little nervous because he knew the age of his dog and conscious that the old dog had lived for many years at the old home, wondered if his pet could adjust himself to this new home. The man believed up until now the old can't teach an old dog new tricks" formula, and worried a little as to the outcome.

The family watched him closely, for a 12-year-old dog was certainly no puppy. Neither was his dog's eyesight so good, nor his hearing. Like a very old man the dog was well into his "second puppyhood."

In fact, the dog was slow; he would get up from his nap and limp badly for the first few steps.

But his mind seemed alert. They need not have worried, for by the end of the first week Prince knew every dog in the block. He knew the lady up the street who was always good for a light snack, so he visited her house every day—always at the same time.

Leans Sounds, Sights

Quickly he learned the sound and sight of every car that traveled the street. He soon recognized as a friend every person that normally walked along the sidewalk, and became alarmed only when a stranger appeared.

He accepted his new home and seemed perfectly content. Because his family was present and all the furniture, rugs and household articles familiar, he took his new home as his own. He learned what dogs in the neighborhood were friends and which ones carried a chip on their shoulder. He knew the people who liked dogs, and avoided the folks that hated them.

His family was pleased, and to prove the fallacy of the old adage, they tried teaching him a couple of "new tricks." They satisfied themselves that, with kindness and patience, a dog, even when very old, can be taught new tricks. Age is no barrier to learning.
