Stafford Hurls Yanks To Triumph in 3rd Tilt of World Series for Lead of 2 to 1

Three Runs Put Across In Seventh

New York —UPI— Bill Stafford was great and dead-game, too, but the Giants always will regret the big double play they didn't make.

Stafford, 24-year-old flame thrower from Athens, N. Y., showed lots of talent in his four-hit 3-2 victory over the Giants in Sunday's third game off his left shinbone in the the Yankees out front in the Series, two games to one.

And he showed plenty of moxie, the way he shook the pain of a sizzling line drive by Felipe Alou that cracked of his left shinbone in the eighth inning. He hobbled about and needed a dash of pain-killer and a whiff of smelling salts to go on, but won the game despite Ed Bailey's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning.

But Bailey's homer made an almost overlooked play in the Yankees' game-winning, three-run rally in the seventh inning all-important.

Pitchers Duel

Stafford and veteran southpaw Billy Pierce of the Giants were matching zeroes at that point and Tom Tresh's single to center to open the New York seventh was only the third hit off Pierce.

Mickey Mantle then lashed a single to left and Felipe Alou, playing the ball on the first bounce, bobbled the high bound. Tresh whipped into third and Mantle legged it into second on the error.

Pierce and Bailey held a hasty conference and decided to give Roger Maris nothing really good to hit. But Billy's first serve was "right down the middle" and Maris ripped it into right field for a single that chased home both Tresh and Mantle to put the Yankees ahead, 2-0.

And when right fielder Willie McCovey bobbled Maris' hit for the Giants' second error of the inning, Maris went to second.

Pierce went out then and Don Larsen, who hurled his famous "perfect game" in the World Series for the Yankees exactly six years ago today, relieved.

Miss Double Play

Larsen got Elston Howard to fly out to Willie Mays, but the drive was long enough to enable Maris to tag up and advance to third after the catch. And when Larsen hit Bill Sknowron with a pitch, the Yankees had men on first and third with one out.

That's when the Giants missed the big double play. Larsen got Clete Boyer to hit a grounder to shortstop Jose Pagan. Pagan flipped to second baseman Chuck Hiller for the force play on Skowron. Chuck bobbled the ball in the webbing of his glove, just long enough to miss getting Boyer at first.

Maris scored on the play—the Yankees' third, and eventually, winning run.

Sunday's 3-2 Yankee triumph made the New Yorkers 4-1 favorites to win the Series and they were 7½-5 to win today's game in Yankee Stadium.

No Law Against

"But don't count us out," cautioned Manager Alvin Dark of the Giants for the umpteenth time. "I know it sounds corny — but the facts are that we have been coming up off the floor all year.

"There isn't any law against us doing it again."

"I'm not predicting we are going to finish the Series here," N. Y. Manager Houk said with a smile, "but we are in a pretty good spot."

After today's fourth game, the fifth game is scheduled here, too, with the sixth and seventh games if necessary shifting to windy Candlestick Park in San Francisco.

O'Dell On Tuesday

Dark said his 19-game winning southpaw, Billy O'Dell, would start the fifth game here Tuesday. Houk did not go beyond today's pitcher but is expected to start Ralph Terry, the 2-0 loser to Jack Sanford in the second game of the Series in Frisco, against O'Dell.

If the Series goes beyond the fifth game here on Tuesday, there will be a day off for travel on Wednesday with the Series resuming in Frisco on Thursday.

Judy Kimball Tourney Victor

Las Vegas —UPI— Judy Kimball, 24, Sioux City, Iowa, found the way to make money in this gambling city. She stayed on the golf course and out of the casinos.

Of course, the fact that she also played 72 holes of golf four strokes better than any other woman in the $15,000 Ladies Professional Golfers Association Championship had a lot to do with it.

Miss Kimball came in with a one-over par 72 Sunday for a 72-hole score of 282 that was good enough for her first tournament victory of the season. First place prize came to a $2,300.

The 282 score retained the four-stroke margin she held over second-place Shirley Spork, Palm Desert, Calif., for the past two days. Miss Spork, also with a 72 Sunday, had a 286 total and won $1,850.

Portland, Ore. —UPI— Tom Gola scored a field goal in the final four seconds of play Sunday night to give the San Francisco Warriors a 118-117 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in a National Basketball Association exhibition game.

Chamberlain scored 69 points in Salem Saturday night, as the Lakers won, 132-125. The two teams meet in another exhibition game tonight in Olympia, Wash.

Lavorante Condition Unchanged

Los Angeles —UPI— Argentine boxer Alejandro Lavorante, 25, whose condition since Sept. 21 has shown little improvement, began another day today in a coma and in serious condition.

The heavyweight's condition was "unchanged," a California Lutheran hospital spokesman said. Last week physicians had hoped Lavorante might come out of the coma.

Dr. J. DeWitt Fox, the neurosurgeon who performed two emergency brain operations on the stricken fighter, voiced concern that the longer Lavorante remained unconscious the greater the possibility for extensive brain damage.

Lavorante was knocked out in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-rounder by Johnny Riggins, San Francisco, at Olympic Auditorium.

Sonny Picked Up By Park Guard; No Charge Filed

Philadelphia —UPI— A Fairmount park incident involving heavyweight champion Charles (Sonny) Liston for the second time in 15 months divided him and the police into two camps today.

The huge boxer, who won the title from Floyd Patterson in Chicago Sept. 25, claimed police discriminated against him by halting his 1962 Cadillac Friday night, taking him to a guardhouse on suspicion of intoxication and then releasing him without placing any charge.

The two policeman who handled the case and their superior scoffed at complaints that police were "picking on" Liston.

Fairmount Park Guard Supt. Francis Deegan said any driver moving about 15 miles an hour on a remote park drive, as Liston was, would have been stopped by an officer.

Deegan said the incident had been handled properly by Aaron Smith, the park guard who stopped Liston's auto, and Lt. Edward Kelley, the officer in charge.

"Aren't they going to let that guy Liston alone?" was the reaction of Alfred Klein, a member of the Pennsylvania athletic commission, which had laid plans to confer with Liston to aid his rehabilitation.

He described the incident as "pure harrassment, unless they can show me that he was drinking."

Mort Witkin, Liston's attorney, said Liston "never touches a drop. Somebody must be picking on him."

JOHNNY PESKY
Will Manage Boston

John Pesky New Pilot Of Red Sox

New York —UPI— Johnny Pesky isn't wasting any time in his new job as manager of the Boston Red Sox.

Minutes after the 42-year-old former Red Sox infielder took over the Boston reins from Mike Higgins Saturday night, he started laying plans for the 1963 season.

"I can't say what the club needs," said Pesky, "but I will sit down with Mike and go over the whole team man-for-man."

Pesky and Higgins attended the third game of the World Series together Sunday at Yankee Stadium and they spent most of the time discussing the entire Boston club.

"It was like a bolt out of the blue," Pesky said of his appointment. "They called me into a room and told me I was the new manager if I wanted the job. This is something I have looked forward to—something any guy in baseball would look forward to."

Higgins, who was serving this second hitch as Boston manager, will remain with the club as an executive vice president.

Sport Parade

New York — UPI — A line drive started big Bill Stafford's pitching career and he felt fortunate today that another one hadn't ended it.

That first one was eight years ago, when Stafford was a 16-year-old high school shortstop in Athens, N.Y.

"I don't like to think about it," he recalled reluctantly. "Our pitcher was struck over the heart by a line drive and died of it some time later."

Stafford was drafted to finish the remaining five innings of that game, struck out all 15 men he faced — and became a pitcher.

Then came Sunday in Yankee stadium when the towering Yankee righthander had a two-hitter going in the eighth inning and San Francisco's Felipe Alou lashed a smoking line drive straight back to the mound. It crunched against Stafford's left shin and, while he leaped forward, recovered the ball and threw out Alou, he had to receive first aid.

Feels Lucky

"I feel real lucky," he said, "when I think of where it might have hit me. For a couple of minutes I was so dizzy I couldn't see the catcher."

Shortstop Tony Kubek ran over to Stafford and asked him how he felt.

"I'm okay," he replied. "I'll make it."

He did, although just barely.

Stafford got Chuck Hiller to end the inning and cling to a 3-0 lead. Then, when he returned to the bench, they put an ice pack on the shinbone and gave the white-faced Stafford a few sniffs of smelling salts.

"When I went out for the ninth inning," Stafford related later, "the leg hurt like blazes. But I didn't have any doubt that what I'd finish and I simply concentrated on the hitter."

It wasn't easy. The throbbing in his leg wouldn't be ignored and Stafford's pulse hammered when Willie Mays led off with a double.

"I just put the pain out of my mind," big Bill said.

Popped Up Cepeda

Mays went down to third when Willie McCovey grounded to Bobby Richardson and stayed there as Stafford got the second out on Orlando Cepeda's shallow fly to right.

Now he needed that last big out and catcher Ed Bailey waited menacingly at the plate. Stafford uncorked his fast ball and "put it right where he wanted it."

"I don't know what it was," Bailey said later. "I couldn't see anything he threw me all day."

But Bailey cracked it into the right field stands for a home run which scored Mays ahead of him and now Stafford was down to a slender one run lead.

"I had two pitchers warming up but it was just a precaution," said Manager Ralph Houk. "I asked Stafford if he could finish and he said 'yeah, you don't see any blood, do you?'"

Got Last Man

So Stafford got Jim Davenport on a fly to left and thereby put the gilt edging on a career which began back there in 1952 with somebody else's line drive injury.

He worked hard to make it.

"My dad was a semi-pro pitcher and slaved all his life in a brickyard," big Bill related. "He gets up every morning at 5 a.m. and it's tough work. He wanted me to have something better. So he fixed up a canvas with holes in it out in our back yard and after I started pitching it was his help that gave me my control."

He had it Sunday, allowing only two hits and two walks while striking out five Giants before that line drive struck him in the eighth inning. The pain turned his face chalk white.

But an eight-year-old memory had something to do with it, too.

Tebbets To Manage Cleveland

By MILTON RICHMAN

San Francisco—UPI — Birdie Tebbetts fulfilled an old "debt of gratitude" by taking over the Cleveland mangership Saturday and the Milwaukee team he left immediately went after Leo Durocher as its No. 1 choice to succeed him.

The florid, 50-year-old Tebbetts agreed to a three-year contract to manage Cleveland Friday, explaining that he made the sudden switch from Milwaukee "only because of a long-standing debt" he felt to President Gabe Paul of the Indians.

Even as Paul and Tebbetts were shaking hands on terms, Milwaukee officials were making every effort to speak with Leo Durocher in Los Angeles about the possibility of his taking over the Braves.

Came About Suddenly

"This thing came about so suddenly that I didn't know anything about it until yesterday morning," said Tebbetts, who worked under Paul as manager at Cincinnati from 1954 until he suddenly quit in mid-season of 1958.

"Gabe called me on the telephone and asked me to meet him at Candlestick Park," Birdie said. "I did and we talked for about two hours while the Giants were playing the Yankees.

"It was a terribly difficult decision for me to make because the people in Milwaukee treated me magnificently and I love Johnny McHale (president and general manager of the Braves)."

Tebbetts was so torn in his decision that he telephoned his wife for help at Bradenton, Fla., finally contacting her in a beauty parlor.

"She told me the choice was strictly up to me," Birdie said. "Believe me, I did an awful lot of soul-searching. But in the final analysis I agreed to go with Gabe because he gave me my start as a major league manager."

As Cleveland's new manager, Tebbetts succeeds Mel McGaha, who was fired last Sunday after finishing sixth in his first year at the helm.

By STEVE SNIDER

New York —UPI— You'd better believe it when they tell you left field in Yankee Stadium is a tough spot to play. Ask Felipe Alou of the San Francisco Giants.

"There's sun, there's haze and there are shadows," groaned Felipe, who had his first shot at it in the third game of the World Series Sunday in a loser against the New York Yankees. "I had a rough, busy afternoon out there."

But even there again today as the Giants struggle to even the series in the fourth game because manager Al Dark is convinced Felipe "played it as well as that field can be played.

Yanks Complain Too

Normally a right fielder, Felipe moved to left for the third game and almost immediately got his baptism on a long ball hit in the second inning by Elston Howard, and which he caught sensationally. In each of the next two innings he had long shots in his direction – one that went for a double by Tony Kubek and another by Mickey Mantle which he caught. But he was charged with an error while trying to field a single by Mantle in the seventh.

Even Tom Tresh of the Yankees complained about left field Sunday, so Felipe wasn't alone.

The Giants were only slightly downcast after losing the third game, after which second baseman Chuck Hiller and pitcher Billy Pierce readily shouldered the blame for lapses that left the Yankees with a 3-2 margin at the finish.

Couldn't Grip Ball

Hiller blew a "routine double play" that should have ended the Yankee seventh instead of allowing Roger Maris to score from third with what proved to be the winning run. And Pierce admitted he served a fat pitch earlier on which Maris knocked in two runs with a single to right.

With Bill Skowron on first and Maris on third, Clete Boyer hit a routine grounder to shortstop Jose Pagan, who fired to Hiller at second to force Skowron. But Hiller was slow getting the ball away to first and Boyer was safe, Maris scoring.

"I bobbled the throw from Pagan a couple times and couldn't get a grip on it to make a good throw to first," said the crestfallen Hiller. "We should have had him easy. It was a routine double play."

Pierce said he was faster in the first playoff game against the Los Angeles Dodgers last week but still felt strong in the seventh when the Yankees clipped him for three straight singles in their scoring spree.
